SEEK MYSTERY MAN SEEN IN VICINITY OF STRANGE MURDER

Windsor, Vt., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The body of Miss Cecelia S. Gullivan, treasurer of the Cone Automatic Machine Co., Inc., was found on a couch in her home, a bullet wound in the head.

The body was discovered by President Frank L. Cone of the company, who investigated this morning her absence from work. An inquest will be held this afternoon.

Evidence that Miss Gullivan was murdered was found by the officers who went to her home. No weapon could be found on the sleeping porch on which the body was found and on which she slept.

The door of the porch leading to the yard was unlocked, but that leading into the house was locked and the key was on the inside. Miss Gullivan hid not appear at her boarding house at any time yesterday.

The police believe the murder may have been committed by a man who entered another house early Sunday morning. Miss Bessie Paddaris, nurse attendant to Miss M. A. Evaris, reported that she was awakened about 2 a. m. and saw a man standing in her room. He demanded money. She told him to take it, but insisted he dragged her from her bed and struck her before escaping through a window. She could give little description of her assailant.

Miss Gullivan lived alone here. She came here about seven years ago from Whitman, Mass., where she is said to have relatives living.

FIRE SWEEPS SHRINE OF STE. ANNE DE BEAUPRE

Quebec, Nov. 8 (I.N.S.).—The Basilica of Ste. Anne de Beaupre—shrine of the lame and blind—was swept by flames early today for the second time in four years.

The statue of Ste. Anne and priceless relics were lost.

Flames threatened to spread, but villagers joined the fire brigade in combatting the onrush of the fire.

The basilica was a temporary wooden structure erected when the second basilica was destroyed in 1922.

Crutches, canes and other articles discarded by cripples filled two large racks and these went up in smoke.

LOSS $500,000

The shrine—the objective of pilgrims from all parts of the world, and where they literally throw away their crutches and walked—stood in the tiny village of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, fifteen miles from this city. The village consists mainly of small stores for the manufacture of souvenirs.

ILEANA PLEADS FOR 'EXILED' FORD AGENT

Aboard Queen Marie's Special Train (in Montana), Nov. 8.—Princess Ileana of Rumania defied the distinctions of social caste today and pleaded the cause of an exiled friend, a youthful American automobile salesman, "Bunny" Ayres, known as J. B. Ayres on the Ford Automobile Company payroll.

He was fired from the royal train for "making statements," but the Princess believes it was because he took her out motoring and to the Washington-California football game in Seattle.

"It was a shame," declared Her Highness today. "He was a nice boy and it was I who asked him to go out driving with me."

AYRES MAY COME BACK.

The pretty princess has taken the matter to Colonel John E. Carroll, acting for the railroads as host to Her Majesty, and there is every reason to believe that Ayres will rejoin the party at Denver.

Ayres told newspaper men Queen Marie's tour was costing Henry Ford $500,000. This all happened Saturday.

'PIG WOMAN'S' STORY BACKED BY WITNESS

Court House, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 8.—Ralph V. Gorsline, vestryman and alleged "love spy," admitted he was threatened with a gun by Henry Stevens at the murder scene and was later sworn to secrecy, it was charged from the witness stand at the Hall-Mills trial today.

This testimony was given by William Garven, special investigator, who said that Gorsline came to him with his story about October 1, 1922. It created a sensation in court in view of Gorsline's denial while on the stand last week that he had made such admissions.

Special Prosecutor Simpson asked Garvin if Gorsline did not say to him that Henry Stevens was at the murder scene and told Gorsline to "get the ——— out of here. This is none of your affairs."

He also asked the witness if Gorsline had not said he was latter taken to a lodge room and made to swear he would say nothing about it.

"That's practically the statement Gorsline made to me," the witness answered.

The vestryman has admitted being in De Russeys lane with a girl companion the night of the murders.

DEATH TAKES ACTOR JAMES K. HACKETT

Paris, Nov. 8.—James K. Hackett, veteran American actor, died here, where he had made his home for years. Death was due to a sudden attack following a long illness from heart disease.

At his bedside when death came was his wife, the former Beatrice Beckley of London, whom he married in 1911, after his first marriage with the actress, Mary Mannering.

Hackett was to have played tomorrow before King George and Queen Mary of England at a London performance of a scene from Macbeth for the aid of the Shakespearian Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon.

It is believed that the body will be taken to America for burial.

Ladies Upside Down Forever Important Britain Acts Quickly Tar Pit Traps, Long Ago

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1926, by the Star Company.)

EVERYBODY, except those with something important to do, attended the opening night of New York's million dollar night club, with the looking glass floor. The million dollar part was old; the looking glass dancing floor was new and was about the only new thing that could be done. Women have done everything, except exhibit their charming personalities upside down. The looking glass floor will do that.

ONE MILLION years hence everything thus far written, said, or done by human beings will be cast aside, forgotten, unimportant. Newton's genius for mathematics will rank with a freshman's ability to count five. Shakespeare and Beethoven will rank with the Chinese tom-toms. Children probably will be born knowing more than any living man knows now. What we call history will seem as dull as the night club, with the looking glass floor. Where Fire Destroyed ~ St. Anne Relics Famed ~ For Miraculous Cures

WAS TEMPORARY BASCILICA

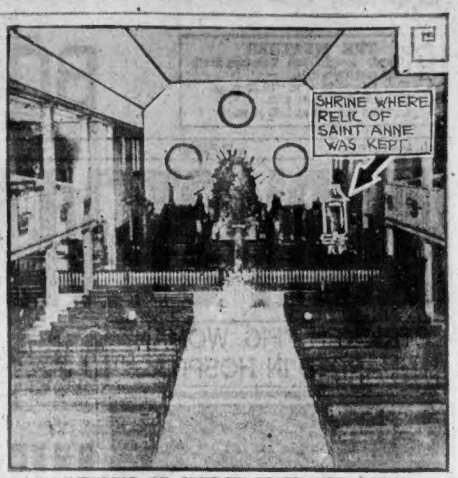
This is the edifice destroyed by fire today at Ste. Anne de Beaupre, Quebec. It was the temporary basilica that replaced the one burned on the same site, March 29, 1923. The latter, built in 1872, replaced the original church erected there in 1620, and which had become so near a ruin from age that it become unfit for service.

MARY MULLEN

of 91 Franklin street, Allston, who had been a cripple three years until cured at Ste. Anne shrine in July last. Her wheel chair is believed lost in the fire.

EDIFICE BURNED IN 1923

Photo of the second church erected on the site in 1872 as it burned on March 29, 1923. At that time the heroic priests risked their lives in saving the relics of St. Anne and the crutches and other aids of the lame, the halt and the blind that reposed in and near the famous shrine. All these were lost in today's fire.



INTERIOR OF CHURCH DESTROYED TODAY

This shows the interior of the temporary basilica of St. Anne de Beaupre, swept by flames today. The property loss is set at $500,000, but in addition there is the complete loss of the venerated relics of the great saint that effected many miraculous cures of crippled and other invalids in the annual pilgrimages from all parts of the world to the little village which is 15 miles from Quebec City.

and sale of replicas of the famous statue.

The fire loss is estimated at half a million dollars in money but the relics, of course, cannot be replaced.

Aside from these relics, venerated by many thousands of pilgrims, the treasures lost include gold and silver in various forms and precious stones, some the gifts of kings and queens; vestments of wonderful texture and priceless church ornaments that never can be replaced.

The shrine was the best known in the world. Thousands of cures were effected.

Several valuable paintings among them "Le Pelerin Rasney," valued at $50,000, and two statues and the holy water fonts near the entrances were saved.

FIRST BUILT IN 1658

The village, site of the shrine, was founded in 1629 by fishermen and they erected the first church of Ste. Anne de Beaupre in 1658. Finally the old edifice threatened to collapse and it was torn down.

The second church was put up in 1872 and by papal proclamation was made a basilica.

Catholics the world over were astounded in 1923 when the basilica was destroyed by fire. A movement was soon underway to rebuild. Meantime the temporary structure was put up to take care of the thousands of pilgrims, that annually visit the shrine.

During the 1923 fire the statue of Ste. Anne and other relics were saved by Redemptorist fathers, who risked their lives to enter the burning basilica. Today the flames got too much of a headway before being discovered.

Grief in Boston Over Loss of Famous Shrine

Throughout Boston and all New England today there were scores of men and women to whom news that the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre had burned again was distressing news.

These were the men, women and children whose cures have been effected before the famous shrine in the little valley north of Quebec, and whose crutches and braces were hung among the trophies of the basilica to give courage and confidence to the faithful but fearsome who came to seek surcease from suffering.

In the years since Ste. Anne de Baupre has attracted pilgrims from all four directions, many New Englanders have received miraculous cures.

One of the cures that stands out is that of Andrew Ahearn of Springfield, who was so grateful for his healing that he returned to the little village the following year—1923—and devoted his entire time to caring for the crippled pilgrims, wheeling them to and from their hotels, securing places for them before the relics and tending to their every want.

A year before—on July 15, 1922—Ahearn himself had arrived at Ste. Anne, a most pitiable figure of a man, diseased, shrunken; helpless from spinal disease and stretched on a cot.

The most recent cure of a Bostonian reported was that of 16-year-old Mary Mullen of No. 91 Franklin street, Allston, who had been a partial cripple for three years following an attack of sleeping sickness.

Mary's cure was effected last July when she left her wheelchair at Ste. Anne de Beaupre, where it is probable it has been burned in the third fire.

ARMISTICE DAY HUSH URGED

Mayor Nichols, in a statement issued today pursuant to the President's proclamation, urged fitting exercises on Armistice Day and recommended that at 11 o'clock the city pause for two minutes to pay silent tribute to the country's heroic dead.

Armistice Day will be celebrated in Boston by World War veterans, who plan one of the biggest parades in the history of the city. Veterans from all sections of the State are expected to be in the ranks that will be reviewed by Mayor Nichols and Lieutenant-Governor Frank G. Allen. The parade will end with exercises on the Common at Park-man Bandstand. Commander William McGinnes of the American Legion will be chief marshal of the parade.

Mayor Nichols' statement said in part: "I recommend that the people of Boston display on high throughout the day the national colors, and that all join in fitting exercises of our gratitude for peace and our desire for a continuance of friendly relations with all other people.

"I also recommend that those at home take from its domestic shrine the precious service flag and again place it proudly in the window in joyful thanksgiving and tender remembrance. It is further recommended that at 11 o'clock a pause of two minutes be taken in the day's occupations in prayerful gratitude to those who fought the fight and kept the faith."

ROYAL FAMILY SHOCKED.

The Rumanian attaches to the royal family were shocked when they learned of the event.

This family habit of keeping loyal to one's friends, no matter what their position, is causing Her Majesty considerable embarrassment. Although comparative quiet reigns aboard since the departure of Sam Hill, Washington host to the Queen, rumblings of another domestic volcano were distinctly audible today with another explosion imminent. Hill, who threatened to slap Major Stanley Washburn, aide to Her Majesty, in the royal box at a Portland horse show, was politely asked to leave the train at Seattle. Orders were issued to the railroad police by Colonel J. H. Carroll not to permit Hill aboard.

ACTOR HACKETT IS DEAD

At the age of twenty-four he was the youngest leading man on the American stage.

Notable successes followed and at the age of 45 he was fortunate enough to fall heir to $1,000,000. He received high honors from the governments of both England and France for his Shakespearian successes and was a great favorite with the French people.

Among his triumphs were "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Pride of Jennico," "Samson," "The Walls of Jericho," "The Crisis," "Monsieur Beaucaire," and the Shakespearian plays, especially "Othello" and "Macbeth." He also managed several stage stars

James Kateitas Hackett was born in Ontario, of American parents, September 6, 1869. He was educated in the public schools of New York city and was graduated from the College of the City of New York.

He attended the New York Law School, but after a few months gave up the study of law to go upon the stage. He made his theatrical debut in Philadelphia in 1893 and a short time later was leading man at the Lyceum in New York.

Hackett married Mary Mannering in 1897, but they were divorced and in 1911 he married Beatrice Mary Beckley of London.

to condemn prudence and care on the part of banking houses," he said, asserting it was only in the interest of safe banking that the banks and bankers procured control of certain Willett, Sears & Co. subsidiaries before handing $3,000,000 to the company.

Mayberry declared Sears testified at the trial that it was nothing unusual for a bank making a large loan to insist on assuming control of the borrowing corporation by putting a man in the management themselves to assure the safety of the money loaned.

He pointed out that evidence showed that the Boston financiers were not anxious to make the loan in question when the company first solicited it.

The placing of private correspondence of certain bank executives before the Superior Court jury that returned the verdict possibly influenced the jurors, even though Judge Callahan later ruled that the executives had not conspired together, Attorney Mayberry declared.

Attorney Mayberry, who represents F. S. Moseley & Co., will be followed by attorneys representing Kidder, Peabody & Co. and Robert P. Herrick in arguments based on the contention that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence and the damages excessive. A courtroom filled with attorneys listened to the arguments.

Miss Williams to Become the Bride of Mayor Nichols the Day After Thanksgiving

There is no happier home in Boston than that at No. 796 Centre street, Jamaica Plain, where three motherless children are soon to call a woman they all love "Mother."

Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols is to give Boston a new "First Lady" on November 24, when he marries Miss Carrie Marjorie Williams, twin sister of the first Mrs. Nichols.

On that date four-year-old Marjorie Nichols automatically gives up the place she has filled so happily, that of wee "First Lady of Boston," but no harassed monarch was ever glad der to give up his throne than Marjorie.

"FINEST IN WORLD."

Miss Williams has been the "mother" of the three Nichols children since the death of her sister, while Marjorie especially considers her aunt the very finest woman in the world.

Even as the smiling Miss Williams was talking of her coming marriage at the Nichols home today little Marjorie crept into her arms, and from this point of vantage added her own comments on the big event.

"After we are married," said Miss Williams, "we'll continue the family as one right in this house."

TO BE "STATE" WEDDING.

The wedding is to be a real state affair. The splendor and color of the event will make history in the Church of the New Jerusalem, where on the day after Thanksgiving the new "First Lady" will assume her crown, and the three little Nichols children will receive a new mother.

Rev. H. Clinton Hay will officiate at the ceremony.

The Nichols children, in addition to Marjorie, are: Clark Salisbury Nichols, nine years old, and Dexter Congress Nichols, seven.

POLICE BULLETS HALT AUTO

Five miles of an auto chase, with the last few yards banged on two bullet-flattened tires, landed James Cullen of Harvard street, Waltham, in Waltham court today, and flattened his wallet by $65.

Cullen was found guilty of driving without a license and failing to stop on signal of police.

Patrolman Maurice Upham of the Weston police, in the car of a friend in Newton street, Weston, jumped into the road when he saw Cullen's car approaching with one light and signaled it to stop.

It kept on, however, and Upham and his friend pursued. In Commonwealth avenue, Auburndale, the policeman fired first into the air, then punctured a rear and a front tire on the fleeing machine, bringing it to a halt. Another man and two girls were in the car.

B. U. STUDENT, SEIZED IN CHASE, FINED AS DRUNK

Robert A. Sallo, student at Boston University Law School, and living at No. 541 Commonwealth avenue, was found not guilty of larceny in municipal court today, but was fined $10 on a drunkenness charge. Saturday Patrolman Hanlon of Lagrange street station saw a group of young men running along Washington street, gave chase and corralled Sallo in an alley.

In Sallo's pockets were found three checks from Boston lunchrooms, and a punch for marking them. The student told the court he did not remember how he came into possession of the checks or punch, but added that it was without criminal intent.

SOMERVILLE BOY DARES DEATH TO SAVE PIGEON

To save a pigeon that dangled helplessly from a radio aerial at No. 118 Summer street, Somerville, George Woods, 14, of No. 40 Atherton street, Somerville, risked his neck today. Twine wound around the foot of the pigeon had become tangled in the aerial and the bird hung from the wires.

George joined Patrolman Donovan, and went to the aid of the distressed pigeon. After climbing a tree to a dizzy height, George crawled out on a limb and dropped on top of the house where he released the bird.

SHOCKED BY NEW HALL STORY

Thinks if Mother and Rector Went to New York It Was for Divorce

By CHARLOTTE MILLS.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 8.—Another shock came to me this morning when Russell Gildersleeve, a lay reader in the church where Dr. Hall was pastor, testified that he saw my mother and Dr. Hall among the bright lights of New York.

It cuts me to the quick to have such phases of my mother's romance bared to the world. I really don't know whether to believe it or not. Maybe Mr. Gildersleeve was mistaken.

But if they did go to New York together it wasn't the bright lights they were seeking. They just wanted to get away from the prying, gossiping atmosphere of New Brunswick.

PERHAPS A DIVORCE.

I have my own thoughts about the matter, too. It may be that they went to New York to see lawyers about getting free, so they could be married. They wouldn't talk about such things to New Brunswick lawyers. I believe they both had hopes of getting free so they could be married and live their own lives in the sight of the world.

Over Sunday I went away from the atmosphere of Somerville and New Brunswick, which is so filled with bitter memories for me.

I went to New York, forty miles away, and tried to lose myself in the great throngs that crowd Broadway. Of course, I could not share the gayety of the people around me, but their happiness as they went their way of pleasure diverted my mind, and for a while I forgot a little my own tragedy.

I wandered a long time, up and

FIST FIGHT IN COURTROOM

A budding fist fight enlivened things today in municipal court as women spectators screamed and men rushed to stop the hostilities when a defendant tried to "mix it up" with Court Officer Colby.

The defendant, Arthur Lewis, was in court with a girl, Veronica Courtney, both charged with a statutory offense. Lewis kept up a running fire of whispers to the girl, urging her to ask for a continuance, according to court attaches.

Angered because she refused to do so, although his own case was continued, as he desired, we was on his feet protesting while she was telling her story to Judge Duff, when the court officer told him to sit down.

Hardly had Colby, who had walked over to Lewis, repeated his command than he found himself dodging a swing at his jaw. They clinched, and it was several minutes before Chief Officer Holleran could quell the disturbance. A reporter held Lewis to keep him from swinging again.

Lewis was placed in his prisoner's dock, but later released on $500 bail. The girl was placed on probation for a year.

STUDENTS EXPRESS REGRET

Public Acknowledgement of Wrong Issued by Presidents of Classes

Public apology for the rowdyism of Technology students in Boston and Cambridge last Thursday evening was made today by the president of three of the four undergraduate classes as spokesmen for the entire student-body.

The guilty students should be punished, the class officers declared in their statement in which they also deplored "the stigma placed upon the name of Technology" by some of the students.

The signers of the public apology are President James A. Lyles of the Senior class, President E. E. Chute of the Juniors, President Paul H. Gill of the sophomores and also Lyles as president of the Institute Committee. The statement follows:

graduate classes and the Institute Committee at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology desire through the newspapers to make a public apology to the citizens of Boston and Cambridge for the acts of certain undergraduates of the Institute last Thursday evening.

"We regret the property damage caused by the rowdyism on the streets and in the Cambridge subway.

"The impromptu parade was not authorized by the student government. The conduct of the Field Day on Friday, which was run under the auspices of the student government, not only incurred no criticism, but has been highly praised by the institute authorities.

"We sincerely deplore the stigma placed upon the name of Technology by some of our members and believe those found guilty should be punished."

TRAIL 'MURDER' IN CEMETERY

East Bridgewater, Nov. 9.—A fantastic tale of the murder of a girl in daylight in a cemetery sent a score of policemen, firemen and civilians on an expedition today to comb the underbrush of Central Cemetery for the body.

The girl was strangled and hurled into the bushes by a man with whom she drove into the cemetery in a battered old auto, according to the story of a Brockton woman, who is herself almost as much of a mystery as the other characters in the drama.

Chief of Police Russell said the description the woman gave of the man with the wornout automobile fitted a man who has annoyed women here recently.

She said she went to the cemetery to copy old inscriptions. From a distance she saw the tragedy and she ran to the car line and once on a car, Brockton-bound, told another woman, who told the motorman, Eben Morse. He told the police.

Two small boys, Teovi Papi and William Cochetti, also told Chief Russell they saw the automobile enter the graveyard and the wheel marks were found, but there was no sign of a struggle.

ELOPEMENT OF GIRL WITH GYPSY BARED BY ARREST

The elopement of a 17-year-old Medford miss with a gypsy to Portsmouth, N. H., October 30, was bared in Federal Court today after the arrest of George McDonald, alias George Drover, of Blossom street, Chelsea, charged with violation of the white slave law.

It is alleged that with a Winchester girl McDonald accompanied the gypsy and companion to Portsmouth. Richard Cooper, member of a gypsy band encamped at North Reading, is sought as a fugitive from justice.

McDonald was arrested by State officers at a garage in North Reading. He will be arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Jenney.

MYSTERY IN BLAZE IN EMPTY CITY BUILDING

Starting with a mysterious explosion, fire today did damage of $3,500 to an unoccupied house in Oak avenue, Dorchester, recently purchased by the city of Boston to make room for an addition to a nearby school.

Timely discovery of the blaze by Charles Brundige of Faulkner street, Neponset, prevented a destruction of the house.

WITNESS BACKS UP "PIG WOMAN'S" STORY IN HALL DEATH TRIAL

SLAIN PASTOR WAS LURED BY 'LIGHTS OF OLD BROADWAY'

He has admitted hearing three shots and a woman's screams.

Simpson brought out that Gow knew Dr. Hall's church.

The story of Mrs. Jane Gibson, the "pig woman," was corroborated today by another State witness, Robert Erling, who said he was with a girl in De Russey's lane on September 14, 1921.

He said he saw Mrs. Gibson riding her mule, Jenny, come down the lane and that she peered into the auto in which he was sitting with his companion.

This testimony is considered highly important to the prosecution's case, as it offsets the announced plans of the defence to put a witness on the stand to claim that Mrs. Gibson's mule was not out of the stable the night of September 14, 1922.

Under cross-examination, Attorney Robert H. McCarter, of the defence, demanded the name of the young women, but Erling refused to give it. He was supported in this stand by Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson, who told the court "The woman might be married and it would ruin her."

LURE OF BROADWAY

McCarter insisted that the name be revealed.

"The woman is married and has two children," Erling informed the court. But Justices Parker and Cleary ordered him to speak.

"Her name is Jenny Lamfort," the witness said reluctantly.

Her married name was not revealed.

The wiles lurbits of Broadway lured the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, it was testified today by the first witness, Charles H. Gildersleeve, former lay reader in the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Dr. Hall's church.

He said he saw the rector and Mrs. Mills at Forty-ninth street and Broadway in the Summer of 1921. His testimony was believed preliminary to further details from other witnesses concerning a New York trips.

Witness Gildersleeve was questioned as follows by Prosecutor Simpson on Dr. Hall's Broadway visit:

Q.—Did you ever see Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills in New York? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—In the late Summer of 1921.

Q.—Where? A.—At Forty-ninth street and Broadway.

Q.—Did you speak to them? A.—No.

Q.—Why didn't you? A.—The distance between us was too great.

On direct examination Witness Erling was thus questioned by Prosecutor Simpson:

Q.—Do you know Mrs. Jane Gibson? A.—Yes

Q.—Have you ever go there to buy cornstalks? A.—Well, I went there to deliver laundry.

Jane Riding Her Mule

Q.—Were you ever in De Russey's lane? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—On the night of September 14, 1922.

Q.—Did you see Mrs. Gibson there? A.—Yes.

Q.—State what happened. A.—I was in an automobile and she passed by and looked in and I turned my head away.

Q.—How was she riding? A.—On a mule.

Q.—What time did you see her there on that night? A.—About 10 o'clock.

Witness was then cross-examined by Attorney McCarter for the defence.

Q.—You said you were in an automobile? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it with? A.—A woman.

Q.—How long were you there? A.—About and hour and a half.

Q.—What was the name of the woman? A.—I refuse to say.

Counsel here clashed over admitting the woman's name, the court finally ruling that the witness must answer. It was then revealed that the woman's name was Mrs. Jenny Lamfort.

Spent Day With Girl

Erling said he had spent the entire day with the girl, having had supper at her house before driving to the lane.

Q.—How long did you remain in De Russey's lane? A.—Two or three hours.

Q.—Now, after you got into the lane what did you do after you stopped the car? A.—We sat in the car for about an hour.

Q.—Then what did you do? A.—We went for a walk.

Q.—How long a walk did you go for? A.—About an hour or an hour and a half.

Q.—So you sat in the car for an hour and a half after arriving even though you were together all day You weren't even talked out. A.— No.

Q.—What did you talk about? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—You walk and you returned what? A.—We sat on the front seat of the car.

Q.—And you talked again? A.—Yes.

Q.—And the woman came along on the mule?

Prosecutor Simpson—I object to this. He said Mrs. Gibson came along on the mule.

The court agreed with Mr. Simpson.

Mule Was Walking

Atty. McCarter—Well Mrs. Gibson came along. Did she stop two or three minutes? A.—I didn't say that. I said she paused.

Q.—Did she look into the car? A.—Yes, and I turned my head.

Q.—How long was Mrs. Gibson there before you recognized her? A.—Not until she came beside me.

Q.—Were you aware some one was approaching you before you saw her. A.—No, not until she was behind me.

Q.—Was the mule walking or running. A.—Walking.

Erling said he didn't remember whether it was a moonlight night.

Q.—Did you hear any shots? A.— No.

Q.—Did you hear any rickety wagon passing? A.—No.

Q.—Did you hear any screams? A.—No.

Q.—Did any cars pass you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Which way were they going? A.—In the direction of Hamilton avenue.

Q.—Did you see them before you saw them going toward Hamilton avenue? A.—No, I only saw the when they started. They were parked. I saw them when the flashed on their headlights as turned on the engines.

Q.—What kind of cars were the A.—One was a sedan.

Q.—What was the other one? A.—A touring car.

Q.—And that's all you can say A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When did you leave the lane? A.—About 11 o'clock.

Q.—Did you speak to Mrs. Gibson? A.—No.

Q.—Did she speak to you? A.—No.

Q.—It was dark, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

DENIES BRIBE OFFER

Erling said, in reply to a question, that he had told his mother about his visit to De Russey's lane.

He said he also had mentioned the incident two years after the murder to Mrs. Nellie Lee Russell, the negress who has said that Mrs. Gibson spent the night of the murder in the Russell home, near the Phillips farm. Mrs. Russell is the woman who is alleged to have beaten Mrs. Gibson severely.

The questioning then turned to an allegation that Erling told Willard Staub of New Brunswick that he could make some money by saying he was in the lane on the night of the killings.

"A short time after the reopening of the investigation in 1926 didn't you meet Willard Staub and tell him "if you will say that you were in the lane on September 14, 1922, you will get some money out of it?" and didn't Staub tell you that he was no" there and wouldn't swear he was?" asked McCarter.

That part of the question bearing on Staub's reply was stricken out.

"I didn't says nothing to Staub,' replied Erling.

Q.—You didn't say that? A.—I don't remember saying it. Staub said to me—and there the witness was stopped.

CHAINED TO HIS COT

Staub, who has not yet testified in the case, gained prominence in the investigation when he signed an affidavit to the effect that he had been taken to State police headquarters for examination and had been chained to a cot overnight.

Q.—Now about these cars you mentioned. Were they ahead of you or back of you? A.—They were ahead of me, turned and came back past me.

Q.—Which came first? A.—The sedan.

Q.—Could you tell who was in it? A.—There was only one man.

Q.—Did he have a mustache? A.—Yes.

Q.—Could you tell who was in it? A.—No, it had curtains.

Q.—Would you recognize the man with the mustache? A.—I don t think I could.

The State's contention is that these were the automobiles in which the slayers went to the scene of the crime.

Q.—Was your car parked near a spring? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know how far the crab-apple tree was from the spring near which your car was parked? A.—Yes. I know the location.

Q.—Well, how far would you say it was? A.—About 3,000 feet—maybe a little more or less.

JINGLES COINS IN HAND

Did you know Mrs. Hall had a Dodge car? A.—Yes, I heard it during this trial.

Q.—During this trial? A.—Yes.

Walter R. Scott, Assistant State Registrar from Trenton, was the next witness. He had with him the burial permits for Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills.

Scott is a dapper young man with a smooth pompadour and full of face. He wore a light gray suit and a bright scarlet and black tie with a gold pin. His answers were clear and assured.

Senator Case insisted upon a minute examination of the permits, much to Simpson's disgust. The dapper little prosecutor sat impatiently jingling nickels and quarters from one hand to the other and glancing frately at the big clock on the back wall of the court.

Fred Drewen, fingerprint expert of Jersey City, was then recalled to the stand. He was cross-examined by Attorney McCarter.

Q.—Understand you took the fingerprints of the defendant, William Stevens? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When? A.—The day he was arrested.

Q.—Where? A.—State Troopers' barracks, Somerville, N. J.

NEW ONE ON WILLIE

Q.—Who was there? A.—A number of people.

Q.—Well, who? A.—Counsel for the defense and others.

Q.—Have you ever been in Somerville before? A.—Yes, many times

Q.—How did you happen to come here? A.—I was told to come

Q.—Were you told to bring anything? A.—Yes. Inspector Underwood told me to bring my kit

Q.—And then you came and waited until William came? A.—Yes

Q.—Describe the ceremony. A.—Well, Mr. Stevens came in from another room and I warned him I was going to fingerprint him. He said: "It is a new experience for me."

Then came a technical description of how fingerprints are made.

Q.—Have the prints been in your possession since they were made? A.—Yes.

Q.—You seem to hesitate. I ask you again: Have they been in your possession since? A.—Yes, I had them, bringing them back and forth between here and Jersey City.

QUIZZED ON PRINTS

A clash of wits occurred between Prosecutor Simpson and Attorney McCarter when the latter asked Drewen where State Trooper headquarters in Somerville were located.

"The Waldorf?" Simpson exclaimed. "Not your Waldorf, Senator," Attorney McCarter snapped back.

"Unfortunately, I haven't any Waldorf, General."

Q.—When did Inspector Faurot see the prints? A.—About August 16 and 17.

Q.—When did Schwartz see them? A.—On the 16th.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Schwartz in police headquarters in Newark? A.—Yes.

The witness said he took the prints to Schwartz for his opinion, but not by pre-arrangement. He also said he showed the card to Inspector Faurot at his home in Middletown, N. Y.

Q.—Did you take more than one impressions of William's fingers. A.—Yes.

Q.—How many? A.—Three.

Q.—Where are the other two? A.—In the court room—Oh, I beg your pardon, they are at home.

SIMPSON 'FLATTERED'

Q.—First you say they are in the court and then quickly a they are not. How is that? A.—Well the truth is, Mr. McCarter, they are in my other suit.

Atty. McCarter: I suppose you are like my friend Senator Simpson, you have a suit for every day.

Prosecutor Simpson—I am flattered that the master at the bar notices my attire. I am not worthy of it.

Q.—Did Mr. Schwartz and Inspector Faurot see the other sets? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you told to make more than one print? A.—No it's customary

Q.—Do you always take three sets? A.—Not always.

Q.—Then it is not always the custom as you said. A.—We have no given number of prints to make. It's according to the circumstances surrounding the arrest of the person.

Q.—Oh! Then the circumstances surrounding the arrest of Willie Stevens warranted three sets of prints? A.—Yes, sir; one set was for the police and the other two were for myself.

Q.—Have you given the state police their copy? A.—No, they haven't asked for it.

A newspaper clipping showing Willie's finger prints was admitted as evidence after objection by Prosecutor Simpson.

The court room was packed when Gildersleeve took the stand.

A few minutes before court was called to order the jury filed in through the judge's chambers and took their seats near the witness stand.

Willie in New Suit

Then the defendants, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her two brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, came in. They were accompanied by Mrs. Henry Stevens and Mrs. Henry Carpender, wife of the fourth defendant who is to be tried later.

Mrs. Hall was attired in a new black coat and a black hat with a pearl pin in it. She was pale as usual. She whispered occasionally to Willie at her right. He wore a new gray suit, but wing collar and bow tie. Henry Stevens sat grimly upright in his chair, talking to no one.

Prosecutor Simpson, who person ally received Mrs. Jane Gibson State's star witness, from a Somerville hospital to one in Jersey City yesterday, said today that radium was needed in the treatment of the patient. Mrs. Gibson has a kidney disease and possibly cancer.

Death Is Cheated

"Radium is available at Jersey City but not at Somerville," said Mr Simpson, "so we took the witness to it.

"Then, too," he added, "New York specialists can get to Jersey City much more quickly than to Somerville should they be needed.

"I am sorry the Somerville people feel as they do about my action in removing the patient. Somerville has a 'nice' hospital."

Mrs. Gibson will not be able to leave the hospital for at least two weeks, it was officially stated today by Dr. Charles H. Kelley after he and three other physicians had completed a thorough examination of the patient.

Mrs. Hall smiled when the front page of a tabloid newspaper with a photograph of "Willie" Stevens' fingerprints was shown to a witness.

Attorney McCarter—Your initials appear in the left hand corner? Witness Drewen—They do.

Q.—The newspaper here says: "This card (one of Dr. Hall's) was turned over to the authorities by this paper. You knew that to be a fact? A.—No, sir, I did not.

Q.—When did you see the newspaper first? A.—This is the first time.

Q.—When did you initial the card? A.—August 19, 1926.

Q.—There? A.—In the office of the newspaper.

Awakened by Dog

Q.—Who took the pictures appearing in the newspaper? A.—A newspaper photographer.

Q.—Of what did he take pictures? A.—The left forefinger of Willie Stevens' fingerprint and the print on Dr. Hall's card.

Atty. McCarter thought to prove by these questions that some of the evidence in the case, including Dr. Hall's finger-marked calling card, had passed through various hands before being turned over to the prosecutor.

Allan Bennett, near-neighbor of the Halls, a bald-headed man, with bulging forehead, receding chin and a brown mustache, was the next witness called. His answers were offensive and he tried to tell more than was wanted.

Q.—Where do you live? A.—Right in the rear of the Hall residence, in New Brunswick.

Q.—Did you notice anything unusual the morning of [illegible]ember 15, 1922, as an early ho[illegible] A.—I was awakened by the b[illegible] of the dog, very sharp and loud.

Q.—What hour? A.—About 3:30 a. m.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I got up and dressed and went out on the front porch. I called the dog off and asked: "Is that you, Phillips?"

Q.—Who was that? A.—William Phillips, the night watchman. The dog had him pinned against a fence.

Q.—Did you talk to him after that? A.—I did.

Phillips is the watchman who said he saw a woman enter the Hall home by a rear door early on the morning of the murder. Bennett testified that he saw no woman at that time.

Q.—Was there a man named Crowley living near there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was your house or his house nearer the Hall garage? A.—Our house was.

Q.—What time did you go to bed the night of December 14, 1922? A.—Between 10:30 and 12 o'clock.

Didn't Hear Noise

Q.—Did you hear any unusual noise in the Hall Garage that night? A.—No, not that I remember.

Q.—Did you notice anything about the Hall house? A.—A little light in the bedroom was burning.

Q.—Are you employed by the Hall family now? A.—No.

Q.—Have you ever been? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know a man named Cosgrove? A.—Yes, very well.

Q.—Do you remember telling Cosgrove that you heard a car come out of the garage that night so fast that it bumped into the side of the garage

STATE 'KIDNAPS' MRS. GIBSON TO FOIL 'PLOT,' SAYS RUNYON

By DAMON RUNYON.

Universal Service Correspondent. Copyright, 1926, by Universal Service.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 8.—The "Pig Woman," Mrs. Jane Gibson, strangest of all that strange cast of characters that is playing the weird production known as the Hall-Mills murder trial, was suddenly dragged to the centre of the stage of events.

When most of the good citizens of Somerville were in church, a white ambulance out of Jersey rolled noiselessly up to the Somerset Hospital, where "The Pig Woman" has been lying supposedly very ill since her collapse in court on the opening day of the trial.

So ill, Dr. A. Anderson Lawton her attending physician in Somerville, said, that it would be weeks before she could go into court and tell the jury what she saw with her own eyes under the crab apple tree in De Russey's bloody lane the night of September 14, 1922.

State Senator Alexander Simpson the bristling little chief of the prosecution, didn't believe that "The Pig Woman" was as ill as all that, and it was under his orders that the white ambulance appeared at the Somerset Hospital, manned by Jersey City detectives and an interne, who swiftly loaded "The Pig Woman" into the sick wagon and took her to the Jersey City Hospital

There she is at this time, and Senator Simpson has specialists gathering over her to see if it isn't possible for her to appear in court and repeat the story of how she saw and recognized the members of the struggling group under the crab apple tree that night of September.

SIMPSON SKEPTICAL

Senator Simpson hasn't believed that "The Pig Woman" was as ill as the doctors have made out since the day she fell over in the Court House after seeing her aged mother, who is said to be in Somerville prepared to testify that she was at "The Pig Woman's" home that night and that "The Pig Woman" never left her house.

Senator Simpson had an idea that friends of the defense might be interested in keeping "The Pig Woman" out of court, because "The Pig Woman's" tale is very vital if it is true, she was practically an eye-witness to the murder. That is why the fiery prosecutor had the ambulance and officers suddenly swoop down on the Somerset Hospital and remove "The Pig Woman" against the protests of Dr. A. Anderson Lawton.

"Senator Simpson, you are jeopardizing the life of this woman," said the doctor. "I forbid her removal."

"You are no jailor," retorted Simpson. "We are going to take her And take her they did.

They examined her over in the Jersey City Hospital, and Dr. Charles H. Kelly, who rates as the visiting gynecologist of the hospital said she was in no condition to be taken into court for some weeks He said her illness is not fatal how ever, and no operation will be necessary.

SEEMED DEPRESSED

"The Pig Woman" didn't say a word on the journey from Somerville to Jersey City. She seems low in her mind, as well as low in bodily health. Dr. Kelly said the trip hadn't hurt her.

Anyway, it looks as if Simpson will not have his "Pig Woman" witness available for some time.

Dr. Lawton declined to permit "the Pig Woman" to be removed from the hospital until she signed a formal statement declaring she left the institution at her own risk. This form is used in all cases when patients insist on leaving the hospital before pronounced cured by the attending physicians.

"The Pig Woman" signed willingly enough Senator Simpson also signed a statement assuming all responsibility for the removal of the woman. Harry Walsh, a Jersey City detective captain, Richard Burke, a detective sergeant and Dr. John Bailey, an interne from the Jersey City Hospital, were in the ambulance when it arrived at the Somerset Hospital.

FIND ESCAPED PATIENT WITH BLEEDING FEET

Brockton, Nov. 8.—In a fit caused by nervous disorder, Carl Henning Johnson, forty-eight, of Denton street, Campello, became suddenly violent at the Brockton Hospital, seized Miss Helen Doyle, twenty-five, a nurse of No. 24 Holmes street, by the throat, and then after threatening her, escaped in scant attire. He was captured by police in Beaumont street today, in a state of near exhaustion. After being treated for bleeding feet he was removed to the Taunton Insane Asylum for observation.

down Broadway, until I was very tired, and when I went to bed I fell into a peaceful sleep for the first time in weeks.

Today, thanks to those few hours of forgetfulness, I feel refreshed and ready to face whatever will pass in review before my mind in the little white Court House in Somerville.

Right now I want to express my appreciation to the readers of the Boston Evening American who have written me letters of sympathy. I can never tell you how those letters have buoyed up my spirit when it was sinking beneath the weight of my sorrow. It is so comforting to know that others understood.

I could not help but feel sorry for Mrs. Hall when those letters were read, showing how there was bitterness in the Stevens clan when Henry failed to show the normal interest in the arrest of Mrs. Hall and Willie.

STEVENS' VERY CLANNISH.

The Stevens were always supposed to be so clannish, and it must have been a terrible humiliation to Mrs. Hall to have these family difficulties revealed. She is a very proud woman and to her family loyalty is an idol to be worshipped.

In a way I envy Mrs. Hall her ability to control her expressions. But I cannot envy her apparent lack of emotions. I would rather feel things deeply, even if I do show them. I think that a person who cannot feel sorrow deeply cannot feel joy deeply either. I am not ashamed of my tears when my heart weeps. I would rather my heart be warm, even if it must weep some time, than have it cold and emotionless.

I wonder if anything will happen this week to erase the chilled look on Mrs. Hall's face?

'PIG WOMAN'S' STORY BACKED BY YOUTH

with the mud guard? A.—No, sir; I do not remember saying that.

William Garvin, former manager of the New York office of the Burns Detective Agency, the next witness, testified that Ralph Gorsline, vestryman in Dr. Hall's church, came to him in New York City three weeks after the murders with a story of meeting Henry Stevens in "Lovers' Lane" the night of the murders, and ordering him to "get out of there and keep his mouth shut!"

He was questioned by Prosecutor Simpson.

TALKED WITH GORSLINE

Q.—Were you connected with the Burns Detective Agency in New York at the time of the murder, September 14, 1927? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you ever see Ralph Gorsline? A.—Yes, he came to me with a story about the murder about October 1.

Q.—Did he say anything to you about seeing Henry Stevens in the lane, about hearing shots and about Stevens saying: "Get the h—— out of here, this is our affair? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't Gorsline tell you he was conscience stricken? A.—He did.

Q.—Didn't he say he was taken to a lodge room afterward and made to swear he would say nothing about it? A.—That's practically the statement.

Attorney McCarter took over the witness for cross-examination.

Q.—When did you first meet Mr. Gorsline? A.—When he came and told me the story, and afterward I saw him and identified him.

Q.—Were you alone when he told you this story? A.—He wanted to be alone. Yes, we were alone.

Garvin, in response to questions, said the next time he saw Gorsline was in New Brunswick six weeks ago.

Q.—Are you the man commonly known as "Greasy Vest"? Objection made and sustained.

Q.—Did you know Gorsline's name when you first met him? A.—No. He would not give his name.

Called on Vestryman

Q.—The next time you had anything to do with the man, you came to New Brunswick? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you find his name? A.—I came to New Brunswick and saw him. Inspector Underwood asked me to come.

Q.—How did you meet Inspector Underwood? Did you seek the appointment? A.—No.

Q.—How did you meet Inspector Underwood? A.—Through Captain Torpey (Jersey City police).

Q.—Where did you meet Torpey? A.—In the lobby of the Astor.

Q.—At that time was McDonough of the Burns Agency there representing the Burns Agency? A.—He came there by arrangement with Captain Torpey to introduce me to Captain Torpey.

Q.—Where is Captain Torpey now? A.—I have no knowledge of that.

Q.—Have you seen him since? A.—In New Brunswick the day the third Jury met two or three weeks ago.

JOIN THE XMAS GOODFELLOWS TO AID POOR

bring good cheer to at least one needy family.

WHAT YOU HAVE TO DO.

Here is the plan of the Boston Evening American—letters are coming in from all sections of New England asking for assistance at Christmas. Most of those letters are from undernourished children and their hard-working, emaciated mothers. Each letter tells its own sordid story of poverty and want.

Nearly every letter written by children contains some statement of belief in Santa Claus, while those of the mothers relate drab details of their battle against poverty.

Do you wish to play the role of Santa Claus to such a family? If so, write to "Christmas Goodfellow Editor" of the Boston Evening American and he will send you one of these letters in order that you may spread good cheer at Christmas.

The "Christmas Goodfellow Editor" will send you the name and address of a family in your own district for you to assist. In other words, if you live in Dorchester, you will receive the name and address of a family living in Dorchester that is in want.

By playing the role of Santa Claus in this manner you will enjoy your own Christmas dinner much more heartily than otherwise. We know whereof we speak, as hundreds of others who have done this in the past have admitted as much.

If, however, you are too busy to personally attend to the matter, the Boston Evening American has planned an alternative. This newspaper will establish a "Christmas Goodfellow" Fund to purchase substantial food for distribution to needy families at Christmas.

This food will be bought at the lowest possible price, quality considered, and delivered for consumption in the homes of the needy on Christmas day. This is the twelfth season the Boston Evening American has extended a helping hand to the thousands of needy families of New England, and we earnestly hope that readers will generously respond to this Christmas Goodfellow appeal.

The need for aid is as great this season as at any time, because of widespread unemployment and illness. Among us are thousands of unemployed men and women whose families are barely existing on account of the inability of the bread winners to secure work.

All overhead expenses of this vast undertaking will be borne by the Boston Evening American. Not even the price of a postage stamp will be taken out of the Fund by this newspaper. This means that if a reader of the Boston Evening American wishes this newspaper to act as his agent he may be assured that every penny of his contribution will be spent exclusively for food. Few organizations can say as much.

Among the prominent persons who have indorsed the American's Christmas fund in the past are: President Calvin Coolidge, Governor Alvan T. Fuller, Cardinal O'Connell, Mayor Malcolm Nichols, Major Clarence R. Edwards, Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, ex-Mayors James Curley, Andrew J. Peters and John F. Fitzgerald of Boston, Rev. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of Park Street Church and other notable Bostonians.

Personal contributions to the fund have been made by many of the above named prominent persons. ARGENTINE SETS WORLD'S RECORD FOR MEAT-EATING

Buenos Aires, Nov. 8 (A.P.)—The capital of Argentina claims the world's championship in meat consumption. Statistics show that last year the per capita consumption of sirloins, tenderloins and the like was 210 pounds. Even this, however, was a falling off from the previous year, when the people required 258 pounds each to satiate their appetites.

"Retire? Not Until I Go to My Grave!" Says Sousa

Chicago, Nov. 8 (A.P.)—"The first you'll hear of Sousa's retirement is when you read 'Sousa's Dead,'" the seventy-two-year-old "march king," Lieutenant-Commander John Philip Sousa said here after directing a concert.

"A man keeps going by keeping going," he said. "When he retires he vegetates. He dries up like a plucked flower and then he blows away."

DOG RISKS LIFE IN FIRE TO PAY DEBT; DYING

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 8 (A.P.)—Three years ago, Walter Casser, a dairy farmer, was given a forlorn little Shepherd pup which a neighbor had found on a roadside.

Today "Collie," the once homeless waif, is dying, a blackened singed, blind and crazed animal, but he has paid his debt of gratitude to those who befriended him.

"Collie" was a playmate of the children of James A. Johnson, tenant on the Casser farm.

Johnson poured kerosene into a stove and when the liquid exploded and enveloped the Johnson home in flames, the dog raced into the house. He pulled at the bed clothing of Mary Alice Johnson until she awoke and made her way outside. She was fatally burned in her dash for safety.

PLUNGES BACK INTO FLAMES.

Then the dog leaped into Mrs. Johnson's room and awoke the mother. She died in an attempt to rescue her two small children in another room.

Meanwhile the dog ran outside again to the sleeping place of Arnold Hedigar, another tenant. Hedigar jumped to his feet as a howling barking creature sank its teeth in his wrist and then was gone.

Willis Stephens was asleep in the rear of a truck. He was to start for Nashville an hour later. Into the truck went "Collie," and Stephens was brought to the ground by the frenzied animal.

BURNS MAY PROVE FATAL.

Then, as the two men ran to the fire, "Collie" dashed by them and leaped time and again in an attempt to gain entrance to the Casser home.

After the fire, which fatally burned Johnson's wife and three children had died down, "Collie" was found where he had crawled some distance away, suffering burns which are expected to prove fatal.

STATLER PHONE CONTRACT IN DEADLOCK

Completion of the new Statler Hotel and office building, originally scheduled for January, may be delayed. It was evidenced today, by a controversy raging between the telephone company and the electrical workers' union over which shall have the telephone installment work.

A vain conference looking toward peace between the warring factions was held today by Mayor Nichols at the behest of Statler himself, whom Mayor Nichols met while in Buffalo.

One more conference may be held and then if a settlement is not reached, the Mayor said, the entire matter may be laid before the Public Utilities Commission to see if the telephone company can maintain its stand and refuse service if it is not given the installing contract.

NO TELEPHONE SERVICE.

At present, the hotel builder is faced on one hand with completion of his electrical work throughout the building, but no telephone service—no with telephone service but no other electric service.

And the contract has already been awarded to a private electrical concern, which is the principal reason for the electrical workers' union insisting that the telephone company be put in its place and toppled as a dictator. The other reason is that if the telephone company does the work, it will employ non-union labor.

The electrical workers' ultimatum is that if the contract is cancelled and the telephone company allowed to do the work, every electrical worker will be called off the job and no more installing of the various services will be done.

LONG CONFERENCE QUITS

At the conference today were George H. Dresser and Charles I. Peirce, vice-president of the telephone company; John Kearney president of the Boston Central Labor Union; Ernest A. Johnson, secretary of the United Building Trades Council and a representative of Electrical Workers' Local 103 of Boston.

They conferred with the Mayor for more than an hour, at the end of which time, Mayor Nichols announced the deadlock and declared that he saw no hope of an immediate settlement. Another conference would be held later, he said, and if this too is unsuccessful, then the Public Utilities Board may be asked to take over the controversy.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGED TO BUS DRIVER

Providence, Nov. 8.—Two warrants each charging manslaughter were served today on Gustav Sundgren, driven of the Providence-Worcester bus that rushed into a trolley car, snuffing out the lives of a man and women and injuring thirty-six others, five of them critically.

Lying at a local hospital, Sundgren is under police guard. Police allege he at first refused to talk, but afterwards admitted he was driving at an abnormal rate of speed, that he was not crowded at the wheel and that he intended to swerve from the car's path, but misjudged the distance.

The driver is also said by police to have declared an official of the bus company told him not to talk. They quoted him as saying that he applied his brakes with all his strength while the motorman of the car did nothing, but the officials of the trolley company declare their employe did everything in his power to avert the crash.

Sundgren is charged with manslaughter in connection with the deaths of Louis E. Kirk and Marion Covill. Patrick J. Canaseph, the motorman, who was arrested at the scene of the collision, is free in custody of counsel for his employers who promised to produce him in court.

Four separate probes are under way, two of them by the authorities and the other two by the bus company an ditrolley company. It is said the bus was crowded.

RUM PLOT MADE WIDOWS OF 4

WOMAN GIVES INSIDE STORY ON COAST GUARD PROBE

The Boston Evening American has concluded the remarkable aerial expose of collusion between Boston coast guardsmen and Canadian rum-runners and Boston Plymouth bootleggers, as given by a coast guardsman who admitted his own guilt.

Now the Boston Evening American gives in detail the equally frank story of how the probe started. It is given by a woman, made a widow in a rum-running enterprise.

It was she who with her story that amazed Washington, started the machinery of investigation that resulted in the arrest of four petty officers from the Boston base and twenty-one seamen. As in the previous story the Boston Evening American does not consider it proper to disclose the names involved while the investigation is on.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Boston Evening American. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

"We are four widows today, made widows by rum-running, and I am convinced by the collusion between rum-runners and men whose duty it was to protect the land against law-breakers.

"I say four widows—but I am not so sure of that. I am sure that three of us are widows, but I am almost equally certain that one man is still alive, either held captive on a rum-runner, or willing to allow his wife to believe him dead.

SEEKS NO VENGEANCE

"I understand from what you have told me that I must not be too definite as it may hamper the law in its course. Personally I seek no vengeance. My husband is dead, but I have been able to find myself a good position, and the tragedy is over as far as I am concerned.

"There were three young fellows, the husbands of three of us. The other man and his wife do not enter the story until later. The three were expert machinists. They were averaging ten or even twelve dollars a day in a machine shop, but a few miles from the heart of the city of Boston.

"Thoughts of breaking the law never entered the heads of any of them, I am sure. Certainly no such thought never entered the head of my husband.

"My husband—let's call him Bob in this story—had one special pal who worked with him. Let's call him Jim—they had been through the war in France together, and got the job in the place near Boston together.

"Often as they left the factory they had seen a motor-boat drawn up near the factory, evidently undergoing repairs of some kind or another. One day as they left a stranger—a foreigner—approached them, said he knew they were machinists and asked if they knew anything about a motor-boat engine.

"They said they did, and he offered them a good price to fix up the engine of his boat after hours.

"They gladly agreed and went to the boat. Bob's eyes were still sticking out when he told me about that engine that night.

"From the outside, Bob told me, the boat didn't look anything out of the ordinary. But he said that the engine was the finest he had ever seen. He said it must have been worth $10,000.

"Both Bob and Jim, when they had recovered from their amazement, asked the foreigner why he wanted so expensive an engine. He simply shrugged his shoulders and said he liked a good boat.

"They worked for several days tuning up the engine, and then finally took her on a trial spin down the harbor. She worked wonderfully.

On the return trip the foreigner suddenly told them to shut off the motor, as he wanted to talk to them.

"He told them that what they probably suspected was true, he was a bootlegger. As a matter of fact the boys hadn't suspected it, so Bob told me. He said that his boat, as they knew, could not only far outspeed the patrol boats, but was so fast that the patrol-boats would not dare to fire on her.

"What he meant by this, Bob explained, was that she could keep so far ahead that if the patrol-boat fired they could still get rid of the load before she came up to them, and then there might be trouble for the Coast Guardsman for firing on an innocent craft.

$1,000 A TRIP

"The foreigner suggested that Bob and Jim should get another pal, and run this boat out to a rum-craft which would be ready for them. It would be loaded out on R.u Row and they would bring it in again. He offered to give them $1,000 a trip to be div ' among them.

"Now here's where I enter the story, and it's no noble part I played. I must admit, Bob came home and told me the whole thing. At first I was afraid for him and forsade him absolutely to do anything of the kind. He pointed out to me the possibility of fur coats, an automobile, even buying a house.

"That last won me over. I guess every woman has the ambition to own her own home. I consented and it cost me my husband.

"They made quite a few trips, just how many I don't know.

"Then one cold night last Winter they left the house to make a trip. This time—and from this point on I learned from investigation at Base 2 and in Washington what happened —when they reached the wharf they found the foreigner who employed them.

Their employer introduced them to the fourth man, and said that he wanted to be taken out to Rum Row.

"The boys were going out to the Patrick and Michael that night. It's all right to use the real name of the rum ship, isn't it? You never heard of the Patrick and Michael, and think it may really be the George and Earle? Well you're wrong. It was the Patrick and Michael, out of Lunenburg. I know all about her.

"They agreed to take this fourth man out—let's call him Bill, actually that's pretty close to his real nickname.

BOAT IS HALTED

"They were about half-way out to Rum Row when they were hailed by a picket-boat. They didn't care, as they had nothing on board. The petty officer in charge of this boat there the name and number of the boat is without name aboard. He asked what they were doing, and the boys grinned, and said they were going fishing, which nobody believed.

"Then the skipper noticed the fourth man. He called him by name and said he was a Coast Guardsman from the Rockland Base who had been suspended for some irregularities there.

"The boat was allowed to go on, of course, and there is a period of some six hours which is all guesswork. Evidently they reached the Patrick and Michael all right.

On the return this picket boat, by a coincidence, of course, happened to be right near the point where the boys' craft had been first hailed. Petty Officer Blank started his patrol boat after her. Suddenly Petty Officer Blank saw flames shoot from the boat, then the whole craft was a mass of flame. When he reached the spot there was nothing left but some burnt wreckage and the reek of alcohol."

(More of this tragedy of the Atlantic and the probe it led to will be given in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

WOMAN SLIGHTLY HURT IN DROP OF ELEVATOR

Clara Burr, 50 years old, of No. 92 Capen street, Medford Hillside, was terrified today when she was caught in an elevator well as it slipped down two stories in the building at No. 24 School street. Except for slight bruises where her head had struck the side of the car, and shock, the woman was unhurt. She was taken to the Haymarket Relief station.

'SALLIE' TELLS WHY GIRLS GO WRONG

The two principal reasons for wayward girls are their own inclinations and lack of training at home, it was declared today by Major Catherine K. Eckerle at the "Industrial Day" luncheon given in the Chamber of Commerce building by the Salvation Army, in connection with its drive.

Major Eckerle, head of the Evangeline Booth Maternity Hospital, said that, contrary to popular belief, it is not principally the girl from a "no account" family that goes wrong.

"Last year," she said, "one of the most pathetic cases which entered our institution had a college girl as principal.

BLAMES INCLINATION.

"However, a great many of the cases which come to our home may be attributed to the own inclination of the girls or to lack of proper home training and discipline, and especially to the latter we hen girls go to strange cities and are freed from all restraint."

President G. A. G. Wood of the Boston Rotary Club, industrial chairman of the drive and vice-president of the Mystic Steamship Company, presided at the luncheon. It was announced that while $70,000 has been subscribed, the drive will be continued to Thanksgiving time.

ONE $5,000 GIFT.

The chairman announced an individual contribution of $5,000 today, the largest single gift to the "Sallies" in a drive since the post-war drive in 1919. The name of the donor was withheld at his request.

Speakers at the luncheon, which was largely attended, included Mrs. H. Addington Bruce, wife of the author and chairman of the women's committee; the Rev. Dr. Edward Sullivan, rector of Trinity Church, Newton; Captain Travers D. Carman, commander of Crossc up Pishon Post, American Legion; B. G. Hawkes, official of the Jordan Marsh Co., and Mrs. Ernest S. Barker, president of the Cantabrigia Club of Cambridge.

Among those present were former Mayor George Richards of Malden, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, the biblical magnate, and W. J. Brown of the Davenport-Brown Co., Somerville.

to the Gloucester base in the effort to fight the rum-runners who have been operating off the Massachusetts coast up to this time. The planes Boston Coast Guard Base 1. Lieut. Byrd in his recent flights are painted yellow with black lettering and are equipped with metal pontoons to allow the planes to land on rocky beaches.

The charges against the men at the Rockland station are similar to those preferred against the four petty officers from Base 2. Lieut. Boston, and the crews of their vessels. The Rockland men were denied, it is charged, with cases of liquor aboard their patrol.

A prohibition agent is mixed up in the Rockland case. It is understood that he investigated on his own authority and reported to the head of the eastern division and commanding officer at the Rockland base.

The Boston Fire, Nov. 9, 1872

Dreadful and terrifying. I had a unique experience. I stood on the corner of Milk and Congress Sts. There was an abandoned Hand Engine at the corner marked "Reading." I walked a short distance on Congress St. toward the bend. The fire was eating up buildings on both sides, but I was ALONE. Not a person on the street or sidewalk, and not a sound but the crackling of the flames. There was plenty of excitement elsewhere. This was Saturday night. You could stand on Washington Street Sunday morning and see the ships in the harbor. The Worcester Fire Dept. was on State St., near the Old State House, fighting in great shape. The Post Office in State St. was about the last building burned, and so they moved into the Old South Church, which was saved. Practically the Financial Institutions were destroyed.

Let us talk about Pianos. You will have a unique but delightful experience if you will expend $1500 and have a Premier Reproducing Grand Piano. It is simple, beautifully made, most durable, and plays like a dream. Also other Makes for Sale at Low Prices. Rent of Pianos $5 Per Rent.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dear Anne:

This is one of those delightfully busy days, with something interesting for every hour. And I'm going to invite you to come along with me, see the sho s and pick up the latest news as we go. So hop on the quickest flyer and meet me in ten minutes at

Spalding-Moss Company

The artists' shop, at 42 Franklin Street. We'll go there first for a lamp to light the way. Or a way to buy a beautiful lamp.

For Spalding-Moss Company have one that's a marvel. An exquisite bowl of Japanese pottery, a lustrous black etched bowl with delicate sprays in gold, mounted on a base of teakwood finish, and blossoming into a most delightful parchment shade. An eighteen-inch Empire shade, upon which ships in softest colors sail the mighty seas.

It's a lamp which gives a friendly glow, filling the room with a restful radiance that welcomes one in, soothes the strained, taut nerves, and makes home seem the one place on earth where a person can be really comfortable.

And best of all, it is only $10 complete. A very special Special. It has a six-foot cord, a two-light socket, and comes in various designs. The shade alone usually sells for $10 or more, and the combination, complete to the last detail, is an excellent value. You remember the Spaulding-Moss Company? I told you about it last week, the shop where we get our shades designed to order, to harmonize with the general tone of the room, or to carry out the pattern of the hangings.

Mrs. Ogden L. Mills of New York, as she cast her vote at the polls last Tuesday.

Now for a Bit

Of Christmas shopping. Why is it that shops must offer special inducements to teach people to shop for Christmas early, when it's the only sane and sensible thing to do? And why is it that some of us will still put it off, when these truly exceptional values are right before us?

I'm thinking especially of the Holeproof hosiery at Tod's, 395 Washington St. This week they have an offer that stands out clear and distinct from the general run of hosiery prices. One of those items which we must pick up when we can—now, not the day before the great day itself.

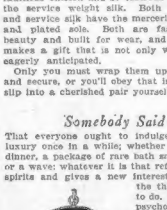
They are featuring the new Parisian colors, those subtle shades usually found in the highest priced stockings, at $1.00 per pair, 3 pairs for $2.85. Lido, Casino, Chanel, Celeste, Renaud, Maxime and Pannon. The delicate tones of tan and taupe which give the keynote of the costume, so lovely in the sheer faultless chiffon and so lustrous and rich in the service weight of silk. In the chiffon and service silk have the mercerized toe, top and plated sole. Both are fashioned for beauty and built for wear, and either one makes a gift that is not only welcome but eagerly anticipated.

Only you must wrap them up now, tight and secure, or you'll obey that impulse, and slip into a cherished pair yourself some day.

Somebody Said

That everyone ought to indulge in a real luxury once in a while; whether it's a hotel dinner, a package of rare bath salts, a facial or a wave; whatever it is that refreshes your spirits and gives a new interest to life, is the thing for you to do. That's good psychology.

So we're now going across to Filene's and indulge in some of that exquisite imported green and gold jewelry. For the possession of a charming gold filigree necklace with a multitude of little jade (imitation) drops revives my soul, the color and style of it certainly does rejuvenate my black satin dress. And what a difference that touch of green makes.



Then for a bracelet to match. An inch wide, of gold beads, and the green fastened with a heavy clasp like an antique oblong locket.

Both the necklace and bracelet are $3.50 each, but one splurge like that gives as much satisfaction as two theatre parties.

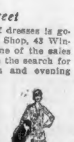
And this new French jewelry is lovely. Never have I seen anything like it. Small beads, large beads and links of gold woven into all manner of patterns. Some are $2.00, some $3.00 and others $3.50. A small price after all, when you realize that it is the accessories which make the costume.

Up Winter Street

A little way, a splendid sale of dresses is going on. At the Miller Apparel Shop, 43 Winter, to be exact. And that's one of the sales we must take in. Barbara's on the search for a better dress for afternoon and evening wear. And you'll probably pick up one, too.

For the Miller Apparel Shop carry an unusually fine line, and when they offer afternoon frocks of their quality for $19.75, it's time for us to take notice.

The $19.75 dresses are mighty attractive, too. So we will plan to take our time, look them all over, and select the ones we like. The beauty of this sale is that we can have two of them for the same price which we usually would have to pay for one.



The Greatest Disadvantage

Of outgrowing the teens is that we have to be so much more careful in selecting our hats. A young girl can dash into anything and look like a new blown rose. An older woman must take more care, more discriminating selection to look best.

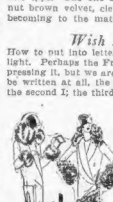
And that's the main reason I want you to go with me down to Jean Brown, and see how quickly she will produce the one hat in the world for you. Jean Brown, you know, has that exclusive shop on the fourth floor of the Little Building, and I do truly believe she has the most expert knowledge of the psychology of hats and beads, types and colorings of anyone in the city.

Her hats are all hand made, and only the most perfect material goes into them. There is something about the embroidery, the sweep and curve of the lines, the depth of the velvets and lustre of the satins that places them at once within the magic circle of the truly select.

Nevertheless, her prices are moderate. In fact, she has a generous collection of unusually lovely ones for $10. And you must admit that is surprisingly low for hats of this type. The one sketched is one, a deep nut brown velvet, cleverly draped, and most becoming to the mature woman.

Wish I Knew

How to put into letters a sigh of perfect delight. Perhaps the French have a way of expressing it, but we are so limited. If it could be written at all, the first letter would be S; the second I; the third L; then V, followed by E and ending with an R.



Because that's where I bought my coat. Silver's Specialty Shop, 64 Blake Building. A perfect beauty; brown broadtail with deep fox collar and cuffs.

No, you can't have one like it, for Silver's coats are only one of a kind. But there are other equally fine values. Especially in the group which have been marked down to $49.50 for your own particular benefit.

And you are bound to like those coats. One was a nut brown Venise, with glorious fox collars and cuffs, another a pinpoint Velour with heavy beaver. One a deep Lustrous combined with wool. All are lined with splendid quality crepe or satin linings.

Then there was a group of beautiful coats for $59.50, one a smoky caracul cloth with big fox collar. And some for $79.50 which are going to make you wish you knew how to express absolute contentment, too.

I'm not saying a word about the lines, or those trim tailored touches, for they will speak for themselves the moment you slip into one. But when you see yourself in the mirror, you're going to say, "Coat of mine, we've met at last. And we won't be parted for at least four years."

Oriental Rugs

Demand attention as soon as cold weather comes, for we need the rich nap and deep colors to give warmth and tone to the rooms.

So we find ourselves at Sarafa, importer of Oriental rugs and carpets, down at 113 Clarendon Street. In a huge shop, covered with piles of splendid rugs, the walls hung with rare tapestries, the balcony draped with Chinese importations, and every foot of space resplendent with some bit of Oriental artistry.

Being a wholesale merchant, more than a retailer, you can pick up your rugs at much less than ordinarily.

Prayer rugs, for instance, in intricate patterns and marvelous colors, are $15 for the 4-foot by 6½-foot size. Rare tapestries, 2½ feet by 4 feet, designed from the historic scenes of antiquity, are $10. Beloochistans, thick, heavy and beautiful, are $15, and the fine old Bokharas range around $35.

And whether it's a strip of Chinese embroidery for a table top, a bit of tapestry for the wall, a couch throw, or a great living room rug, Saraf has it—at a price that is surprisingly low.

We, personally, are interested in a small Anatolian mat to cover the woodwork in front of the living room door, which he has for $5. A lovely thing, with all the exquisite shades and delicate patterns of the large rugs.

The Alarm's

Gone off. As sharp and clear as that old dollar clock that wakes you up every morning. And I do hope that this one will wake every man and woman up to her opportunity. For trains don't wait for our convenience, and neither do special sales.

This is the great annual November event in the men's furnishing department at Talbot's, 395 Washington street. And it certainly is "ringing the bell," hitting the top notch on everything that concerns a man in the line of shirts, union suits, sweaters, bath robes, gloves, pajamas and neckwear.

And inasmuch as a woman is always the general manager of her men folks' clothing department, we'd better go down and take a look at some of the splendid values.

Now those shirts look good. Mighty good. Well made shirts of fine quality. Madras, beautiful patterns, for $3.85, or three for $4.50. Woven Madras, for $4.75, and the splendid Bates Street shirt for $2.35.

Bath robes, warm woolly bathrobes, in soft shawl colors, are only $4.85. And those luxurious elderdown robes are marked $8.85. Oh, shades-of-former-Christmas prices, lead me to them before they're gone.

And the other things seem equally good. So this trip is worth while, just as every trip to the Talbot store has proved worth while.

My Watch

Tells me it's time to travel down Tremont street to Regan Kipp Company, and get an idea of the latest tick in timepieces for Barbara's Christmas present.

It will be a Gruen, of course. Having borrowed mine daily, she knows its absolute reliability, hour in and hour out. And she loves that thrill of satisfaction when her friends catch sight of the name across its face.

They are distinctive, those Gruens; and they are masterpieces of craftsmanship—an American made watch with all the aristocratic daintiness of the most exclusive Swiss designs. And as the final word of recommendation, the watch Regan Kipp and Company have featured for years.

So it isn't a question of which make, or the "works," but which case. It comes in so many different styles and sizes, so many different etched patterns, from the artistic little white or green gold-filled cases for $35 to the Iridio Platinum, set with diamonds and sapphires, and 17 ruby jewels, for $635.

And here we are down at 162 Tremont, right next to Keith's Theatre, with a case full of stunning watches to examine. A watch of a standard reliable make from a house of superior reputation—not a bad combination, is it?

Next on the List

Is a pot of begonias for Mrs. Miller, which will be our day's kindly deed, and also give us a perfectly good excuse to spend a glorious few minutes at Penn's the Florist.

Begonias are the most cheerful plants for winter with their bright pink blossoms nestled among the deep green leaves. Cheerful, hardy and long lived. More reasons than most of us have for being popular. And as long as you pick off the wilted flowers, they will keep on blooming. Not forever, of course, but for a period of several months.

Then there are the Cyclamen, another brilliant rosy house plant which remains healthy and productive for a long while, the tiny little buds pushing themselves up from the roots while the top is one mass of blossoms.

Whatever would we do in winter without a few of these wonderful gifts of nature to tend and watch. Perhaps we older ones could get along, for we have learned to look ahead and live by the seasons as well as the day and know that spring will come along sometime. But the children—they need to see the miracles of growing things every day. The house needs them to make it a warm, living, vibrating home. And so we all need Penn—the Florist.

There, That's

Enough for today. But it's not all, and with so much more to do and see, I'm going to take you shopping again next Wednesday. So hope for clear weather, and plan to start early and stay late.

Faithfully yours,

Priscilla

WINTER HEADED FOR N. E. FROM NORTHWEST

Out of the caverns of cold in the far Northwest the vanguard of Winter is trooping towards its annual bivouac in New England.

The sendoff to the stealthy monarch in Saskatchewan and Alberta, where his march began, took place in temperatures of 4 above and 2 below respectively, ominous portents of what is in store for the East before the end of the current week.

Snow has fallen, and is falling, through the Dakotas, Kansas and Minnesota and the weatherman expects the rainstorms east of these States will turn to snow before nightfall.

The lingering caress of late summer, in which Greater Boston basked over the weekend, will continue for 36 hours more, probably further softened by heavy rain.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight; Tuesday partly cloudy, probably with rain; not much change in temperature; moderate to fresh easterly winds.

STREWS POSIES ON COOLIDGE'S 1928 'GRAVE'

By GEORGE R. HOLMES, International News Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The Democrats have already started to strew flowers on the figurative political grave of Calvin Coolidge—as a result of the off-year election.

Democratic gossiping to the effect that the losses suffered by the administration in last week's elections have made Mr. Coolidge "unavailable" for renomination in 1928 broke out today in a more sedate form by the issuance of a statement by Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tennessee, making the same claim.

"The most conspicuous result of the election is the likely elimination of President Coolidge from the presidential picture of 1928," said McKellar.

"It would have been infinitely better for the President's prestige for him to have come out boldly and courageously for the election of a Republican Congress, even though he lost, rather than limiting his activities of having his picture taken with Senator Wadsworth and coming out alone for his personal friend, Senator Butler."

SAVE MOTHER AND GIRL IN WEST END FIRE

FIREMEN CARRY THEM OUT

Mrs. Helen Mascari and daughter, Marie, aged 3 years, who were saved by firemen when flames menaced the building in which they live at No. 47 Chambers street, West End. The flames routed 45 persons.

With a fire scare at No. 47 Chambers street, West End, early today, 45 persons were routed from slumber and scurried to the street thinly clad, while scores more from nearby tenements hastily donned wraps and fled, fearful that the flames would spread.

The fire was of undetermined origin and started in one of the rooms of the apartment of Vincent Passerino on the first floor.

Among those who were led to safety were Mrs. Helen Mascari and her daughter, 3, on the second floor; Marie Purpora, on the top floor; Helen Springer, 12, and her sister, Esther, 11, on the first floor, Buddy, the pet dog of Helen Springer, whose barking aroused the tenants, also escaped.

SPEAKERS LIST INSTALMENT BENEFITS

The advantages of the "installment plan" of buying and selling were pointed out today at the fifth annual convention of New England Purchasing agents at the Hotel Bellevue by William T. Foster of the Pollack Economic Foundation. He made the point that though many merchants differ on the benefits of the installment plan, the fact remains that millions of dollars worth of goods could not be produced at all were not the installment plan in force.

"Consumers," he said, "cannot afford to buy automobiles, furniture and other goodsout of their current incomes. Accordingly industry has resorted more and more to the device of handing them goods to be paid for out of future income.

HOW IT AIDS INDUSTRY.

"Take the automobile, for example. Cars were sold in 1925 to the retail value of about $3,500,000,000, with only about one-third of that amount paid down. It is plain that many of these automobiles could not have been sold were the consumers compelled to pay cash for them. It is equally plain that without a market so many automobiles would not have been produced, and less work would have been given the men in the trade.

"From these plain facts we must come to this plain conclusion: The Expansion of instalment seling has saved the country, up to this time, from a marked business depression."

The next speaker, Dr. Ellsworth Huntington of Yale, gave the purchasing agents an outlook on business from an entirely new viewpoint.

BLAMES PANICS ON SUN.

He traced the connection between the sun's heat and business cycles, pointing out that a change in the sun's radiation might bring a drought that would in turn bring a business panic as was the case in 1837, 1874 and 1893.

The speaker also showed that this change in the sun's radiation might bring about an excess of rain with equally dire results on business, pointing to make his point to the Irish potato famine of 1845-1848.

"Hand to mouth buying is here to stay," said Creighton J. Hill of the Babson Statistical Organization, "and hand to mouth buying is a step toward better distribution methods.

"Retailers are better off by the system of hand to mouth buying because they do not stock up so heavily and consequently suffer less by sudden style change. The bankers of the country favor it."

INVESTIGATE ROBBERY OF MAN FOUND DEAD

While the police today were investigating what is believed to be robbery after death, the identity of a man found in an alleyway in the rear of No. 88 Dover street, with pockets emptied, had not been determined.

It was believed, after the body was turned over to the medical examiner, that the man died from natural causes and his pockets were rifled after death.

WIDOW FIGHTS IN CURTIS ROW

Mrs. Margaret Maude Curtis, society leader and widow of Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis, fighting the petition brought by her daughter, Miss Penelope Curtis, for her removal a strustee of the Curtis estate, declared in Suffolk Probate Court today that she has been "totally ignored" by Nelson Curtis, a co-trustee under her husband's will.

Under an all-day cross-examination by her daughter's attorney, H. B. Sygrade, Mrs. Curtis testified that on one occasion when Nelson Curtis sought her advice about a large investment she had opposed it. Later she learned he had gone against her wishes and made the investment, she said.

She was questioned at length concerning the income of her home at No. 131 Bay State road, which she sublet when she went abroad. Mrs. Curtis' daughter claims the income should have been turned back into her father's estate.

MAKES MILLION IN 8 YEARS

How long does it take to make a million? William E. Smith, owner of a string of cafeterias, and among the city's newest millionaires, accomplished the feat in eight years.

Mr. Smith, owner of the Georgian cafeteria, started from almost nothing, less than eight years ago and Tuesday he opens his tenth cafeteria at 296 Harvard street Coolidge Corner. The new cafeteria is the most elaborate of the entire string, being lavishly decorated with marble, handwrought iron, and special walnut furniture costing $350,000.

TIDAL WAVE DEATH TOLL IN ITALIAN TOWN NOW 32

Rome, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Mounting over the week-end, the death list in the tidal wave which swept the town of Bari Saturday was placed today at 32.

The cabinet has voted 500,000 lire for the relief of the sufferers.

WHITEMAN TOPS BIG BILL AT METROPOLITAN

Paul Whiteman, baby and hearty disciple of the Great God Jazz, shares the billing at the Metropolitan this week with the unctuous screen comic, Raymond Griffith in his latest release, "You'd Be Surprised."

And the audience is enchanted with both. The able-bodied Paul leads some two-dozen of his merry men through the musical didoes of a program that includes everything from the light trifles of the latest popular niftties to the dark lodge of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Besides the concert selections, there is the usual syncopated side-show invariably bound in with the offering of the "performing" musicians. A tooting trombonist, dressed like a burlesque comedian, rises in his place and doubles in brass fire-pumps and trick fiddles. From the cavernous depths of the bass tuba comes the weird squeaks of radio static—amid the mockery of muted cornets and the whining complaint of the outraged violins. Clever clowning—and hugely amusing.

In "You'd Be Surprised," the silk hatted Ray, as a comic coroner, gets hopelessly tangled in the maze of clues on the murder mystery—a luscious kidding of all things connected with the most-up-to-date "investigations."

Accompanied by a manifold phrase, containing nothing more formidable than candy, Ray and the scene of a very big class killing and proceeds to unravel much in the way of clothing, a few of the knotted skeins of the mystery. A last minute confession saves him the trouble. Besides being the smartest acted film comedy in months, "You'd Be Surprised," also boasts some of the best subtitles ever written.

TRITE TRYST OF THE SCREEN LOVERS

TOLD AT TWILIGHT

In "Gigolo," at the Boston, Jobyna Ralston and Rod La Rocque appear in this tabloid version of that grand old song, "Come Into the Garden, Maude."

BEBE DANIELS SCORES IN FILM

Bebe Daniels, in her "heavy" collegiate film story, "The Campus Flirt," leads the bill of photoplays for the first three days of the week at the Keith.

Being a comedy of university life there are escapades aplenty. Throughout, the undergraduates remain on the loose and never subside until the day has been saved for dear old Alma Mater on the athletic field. The fleet Charlie Paddock is seen as one of the merry running mates and further comic capers are generously provided by the Swedish comedian, El Brendel.

And on the same bill, Marcelina Day, Mae Busch and Theodore Von Eltz are at great pains to prove in "Fools of Fashion," that women cheerfully sacrifice all for the sake of perfect curves.

Beginning Wednesday, Marshall Neilan's film treatment of the Victorien Sardou mystery drama, "Diplomacy," will be presented, with Blanche Sweet, Neil Hamilton, Lois Williams, Arlette Marschal and Matt Moore in the featured roles. Sharing the same program are George K. Arthur and Dorothy Revier will amuse themselves with the farcical complications of the domestic comedy, "When The Wife's Away."

ROD LA ROCQUE IN 'GIGOLO'

Rod La Rocque, rising De Mille star, has his best picture in the film treatment of Edna Ferber's "Gigolo," now at the Boston.

He has the role of a young American aviator whose career is ruthlessly mutilated in the World War and subsequently rebuilt by the services of plastic surgery. Because of his greatly changed appearance, his most intimate friends fail to recognize him as the hearty hero they once knew.

While employed in a smart European cafe as a "gigolo"—a sort of taxi dancer—he is suddenly confronted by his boyhood sweetheart, dances with her, but she also fails to recognize him until her paid partner betrays certain "give-away" evidences of former charms. Of course, the lady less never failed to love him and unfaltering arms make everything else quite comfortable.

Jobyna Ralston, former leading woman with Harold Lloyd, is charmingly attractive as the girl, and Louise Dresser captures the character acting honors in the role of La Rocque's mother victimized by the scheming villain.

A bill of vaudeville and the usual shorter screen subjects complete a pleasantly entertaining program.

FAMILY DRAMA AT OLYMPIA

Doris Kenyon's first starring picture, "Minutes," is now on view at the Washington Street Olympia.

It is a highly emotional drama of domestic tribulations in which a villainous husband of deepest dye frames his long suffering wife and sends her to prison for the theft of some jewels as the most convenient and effective means of getting rid of her.

To accentuate his wickedness, a relentless scenarist provides a gay masque ball in his home at which he must play host to gay throngs of carefree guests while his sick wife is left to unattended upstairs. And now for the "dramatic minutes."

Suddenly, the music stops and a scene, revolver in hand, prepared to use it on the wastrel husband. But bloodshed is averted by the timely arrival of little "Sonny" and all hearts are melted at this touching spectacle. The "villain" confesses and all is made well by an offer of marriage from a handsome hero in the person of Warner Baxter.

Vaudeville and short screen subjects complete the bill.

Children Hit by Car

Nancy Allen, 5, No. 1130 Harrison avenue, Roxbury, and Arthur Green, 4, No. 41 Reed street, Dorchester, are at the City Hospital suffering from multiple injuries following being knocked down by an outbound Elevated car in front of 184 Dudley street.

Page—Nizer—Richie! Good used cars of all sizes and makes are being offered during the Year's Greatest Used Car Sale in American-Advertiser Classified Ads.

NATIONAL TEST FROM WCWS

With WCWS transmitting every night on a power of 500 watts, they are reaching to all parts of the country. However, on the week of November 15, a national test will be conducted.

From 8 o'clock in the evening until 4 the following morning this test will be given. The station will attempt to reach every point in the Union and into the provinces of Canada.

Radio fans will be requested to send in letters and telegrams, and those received from the greatest distance will receive valuable prizes. Not alone will the distance listeners be awarded, but local listeners as well.

The fans reporting the first reception in each city in Connecticut will also receive a prize. It is expected that a remarkable record will be made, and the engineers at the station as well as the artists who will participate in the test of stations WCWS at Bridgeport, Connecticut are now working on the program.

COLLEGE LIFE SHOWN IN FILM AT MODERN

A film story of university life that rings true tops the bill of new photoplays at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week, "College Days."

It is a well directed and amusing film that enlists the talents of Marceline Day, Charles Delaney, James Harrison, Kathleen Key and Edna Murphy. In the scene of the football game there are twenty-five stalwart gridiron warriors in a series of plays that are very nearly as exciting as one of the Big Three contests.

TODAY

name the elements thus far discovered, and few know, looking up at the dirigible Los Angeles, that an element recently discovered, helium, keeps the ship floating.

GREAT BRITAIN, always acting quickly, where trade is concerned makes all arrangements for our recognition of Canada as a separate State, independent of Peking. They have been shooting each other and everybody else including foreigners with British among them. That makes no difference to Britain, where business is concerned.

THIS EARTH has always had its excitements, disasters and woes. Thousands of centuries before men came here to make trouble, animals of all kinds met death in a strange jumble. Tar pits on the Rancho La Brea, now part of Los Angeles, have caught and preserved for all time such different animals as the imperial elephant, sabre tooth tiger, giant ground sloths, long extinct camels, and endless others. No other spot on earth has yielded so many different animals to the scientists' research. And that's appropriate. No spot on earth equals Los Angeles in its varieties of people.

THE CITY will now make a park of La Brea, preserving the tar pit animal traps for all time. The owner of the ranch, G. Allen Hancock, generously gave the valuable property to the city.

UNTIL RECENTLY some old ladies in London were enormously rich, having inherited two or three shares of the private company that owned the water supply of the World's biggest city. No one could guess what that company would be worth. Many Londoners live in wealth, because they hold "perpetual leases," at rents never changing, on valuable London land.

PERPETUAL leases were declared to be against public policy so they were suppressed —that is, the owners will lose the right to renew the leases at the old rate, TWO THOUSAND YEARS FROM NOW. But until the year 3926 the lease owners will pay fifty to a hundred shillings or less a year, and get modern yearly rents as high as fifty thousand pounds.

GENERAL ANDREWS, boss of prohibition enforcement, says government agents must be polite, even when raiding a still or blind pig, courtesy must dominate. The trouble is that bootleggers, with their automatics, machine guns and other equipment, make it hard to be Chesterfieldian. You might as well expect a bootlegger to be polite with a hi-jacker. It is a rough game, and efficiency usually consists in shooting first.

THE PEOPLE would like to see the bootleg business wiped out. Whatever their prohibition attitude, they do not want to see the latter put on the whiskey basis that prevailed in Jefferson's day. He thought light beer and wine would supply a remedy. This country is trying prohibition, but is not enforcing it. Less enforcement courtesy would be acceptable, if less bootleg whiskey and gin went with it.

Say "Good Morning" and mean it!

It's hard to get a smile out of some men before noon simply because of something they didn't eat.

Once they get next to themselves and balance up their diet, it's amazing how quickly they get back to normalcy.

Putting you out of sorts with the world is only one of the bad results from too little bulk in the diet.

If neglected, that lack may endanger even health itself.

Eat this corrective food daily for health

Start tomorrow morning eating Post's Bran Flakes. Eat it every morning for two weeks and see how much better you feel towards the world and everybody in it.

Post's Bran Flakes is a delicious cereal that supplies the needed bulk to millions of people every day as an "Ounce of Prevention."

In addition to bulk, it also supplies the body with: phosphorus, iron, protein, carbohydrates and vitamin-B; all vital health essentials.

MAPLE NUT PIE FITS EVERY TASTE AND POCKETBOOK

I BEAT TOGETHER EGG YOLKS AND CREAM WITH BUTTER, SUGAR AND CORNSTARCH
NEXT I ADD THE HOT MILK AND COOK TILL THICK
NOW I ADD 1 TSP. MAPLE FLAVORING AND COOL
AFTER ADDING CHOPPED NUTMEATS POUR INTO PASTRY SHELL
BEAT 2 EGG WHITES WITH 2 TBSP. SUGAR ADDING A DROP OR TWO OF MAPLE FLAVORING
THEN I SPRINKLE WITH NUTMEATS AND BROWN IN MODERATE OVEN.

FROM THE WATCHTOWER

Three cheers—for mushrooms! Once again they are plentiful and low-priced, 50 cents a pound being a fair average.

Other good buys in vegetables now are onions, turnips and cranberries.

In meats, chuck roasts are comparatively low and also rump steaks. Lamb is slightly higher.

Fish seems to be plentiful and fairly reasonable, particularly halibut, which averages 40 cents a pound, and mackerel 15 to 22 cents.

BAKED NOODLES AND CHEESE

One-half pound of noodles, ½ pound cheese, salt, paprika, ½ teaspoon mustard, 2 cups medium thick white sauce, bread crumbs.

Boil noodles in a large amount of water until tender. Drain and add the white sauce and cheese and stir until the cheese melts. Add salt, a dash of paprika, and the mustard. Put into a baking dish, cover with fine bread crumbs and bake until brown.

PLANKED HAMBURG STEAK

One and one-half pounds chopped lean raw beef, 1½ teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, about 1 cup of milk. Mix beef and seasonings, add as much milk as the meat will take up, shape in an oval cake, put in a hot greased frying pan, turn frequently and cook about eight minutes. Place on a plank on which is a border of browned mashed potatoes, and arrange around the steak such vegetables as are at hand. Spread the steak with butter and serve at once.

TO SPRINKLE CLOTHES FOR IRONING, use a whisk broom and have the water hot, as hot water will dampen them more evenly.

Interesting Letter From a Club Member

I am sure that all of my readers will be as interested as I was with a letter that has come to me about a cleaner-polish, which you have probably noticed represented in our pages. I must share this part of her letter with you.

"Having read your description of the threefold metal polish on the Martha Lee page I became interested, although I rather doubted—to be frank—whether any polish could really clean and polish all metals and still be equally good for glass and porcelain as my experience had been to the contrary. However, I tried it out and found it perfectly splendid. It did a wonderful job on my copper boiler and silverware, and then I tried it on a mirror. Simply fine—and right here is where the fun began.

"The men disappeared, but after a vain search I concluded that it had gone in the waste, so I bought another can. After two weeks I was amazed to find this too had vanished.' Asking my husband if he had seen it brought an evasive 'not lately,' and then my wife began to fumulon, because I haven't lived with him twelve years for nothing. The garage was the answer. Like all the men he drags everything to the garage that isn't fastened down, and sure enough—there I found my can of polish along with my paring knife and an egg-beater, for what purpose Heaven only knows. When he owned up I found out he uses it for the nickeled radiator and to polish the car windows, so now we have two cans of this polish at our house, as we at last agree on one thing, it's the best polish we ever have used and it seems to be good for everything."

Nuts and Maple Flavoring Used in Prize Pie

If you've a taste for sweets (and who of us has not), and are a lover of flaky pies topped with towering meringues, you'll enjoy making the nut pie that was one of the features of Martha Lee's Kitchen this past week.

It's flavored with maple through the use of concentrated maple essence which, when combined with sugar or sweets gives the well loved true maple flavor. This is a most economical flavoring as well as a delicious one for it is only necessary to use about one-third as much as of the average flavoring. Just a drop or two produces the dainty, delicious maple flavoring. In fact, one teaspoon combined with two cups of boiling water and four cups of sugar makes a quart of excellent table and griddle syrup. We find our bottle of maple flavoring always handy for cakes and frostings, bread and cookies, desserts, sauces, pies, ice creams, candies, southern sweet potatoes, hard sauce, etc. (For a 3c stamp I'll gladly send you a recipe book for all these dainties.)

And now for our recipe.

NUT PIE.—3 eggs; 1 cup sugar; 2 teaspoons cornstarch; ½ tablespoon butter; 1¼ cup hot milk; 1 teaspoon Mapleine; ¾ cup chopped nuts.

Beat the egg yolks and cream with sugar, butter and cornstarch. Add hot milk; cook until thickened. Add maple flavoring and cool. Add chopped nuts; pour into fresh-baked pie shell. Beat egg whites with 3 tablespoons sugar, flavor with a bit of maple flavoring, sprinkle with chopped nuts, and brown in slow oven.

THANKSGIVING NEEDFULS

THE BIG DAY'S NOT FAR AWAY. The extra work's fun in kitchens equipped with helpful tools. For instance, a magic cover for pastry board and rolling pin, chemically treated, prevents sticking. Hygienic. Recommended by well-known teachers of cookery. Once used, never again without. Saves flour, time and patience. 75c a set.

THERE'S NEVER A STICK to layer cakes if you use loose bottomed pan. Prevents cake tragedies. Simplifies dishwashing. Two pans of high grade aluminum, for 75c.

ANOTHER BETE NOIR is the sponge cake pan. Luscious cakes 8 inches deep slip easily out of special sponge cake aluminum pan. Removable center and bottom. Lasts a lifetime. Will make your reputation for all sorts of picture cakes.

THERE'S NOTHING MORE POPULAR than English muffins. Easy to make if you own the muffin rings. 12 removable rings come in best quality blued steel pan. When rings are removed, use pan for cake or candy making. 75c. Muffin recipe on request.

WHY SERVE BUTTER in haphazard lumps? French butter curler drawn over the butter makes a picture of each serving. Listen to your company exclaim at the pretty golden curls.

OUR DREAMS HAVE COME TRUE! A pulverized sugar that won't lump. No more do we pound with potato masher and rolling pin. New sugar is absolutely guaranteed lumpless. Same price as the cussed kind. Certainly deserves a place in every home.

CORN POPPING TIME IS HERE! Popular pastime is real wholesome fun. Particularly if you use a certain easy popper. There's health and nutrition in the crisp, flaky kernels. Popper sets right over gas burner. Rotary handle keeps kernels moving. Write me for recipe for Krispets and Popcorn Balls. Have Fakirs' Row right in your kitchen.

EVERYBODY'S CELEBRATING National Canning Week. Can't I send you a fat little recipe book full of new interesting ways to use canned foods? Home-made chop suey, dessert salads, cutlets, chowders, pancakes, omelets and what not. Really a dandy book—specially when it's free.

THERE'S A SOFT SPOT in every man's heart for French fried potatoes, but Mother's not so keen on the extra work. New French fried potato cutter cuts them perfectly in jig time. Big labor and time saver. One of our most modern and efficient kitchen helps. Makes these crisp "taters" a pleasure for all concerned.

ICE BOX CAKES are all the rage. Ten recipes for extra good ones come with special spring cake pan. Each recipe as good as a different kind of ice cream. Pan can be used for large loaf cakes, too. Side springs away and bottom drops out. 8 inches diam., 3 inches deep.

I'M SAVING MY DIMES AND PENNIES to splurge in just these kind of kitchen helps. Saved $8 last month—And never missed it. If any of these items appeal, just check the ones that interest you, attach that necessary name and address and loose 2c stamp and send to me.

Always faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Popularity of Pretzels Not Affected by Prohibition

Pretzels have, in recent years, found much popularity with the American public, due, no doubt, to their wholesomeness as a food.

We need only to inquire into the ingredients which are used for making pretzels to assure ourselves they are good food. The basis of good pretzels is flour, blended, to which is added yeast and shortening. The mixture is made into a "sponge," set similar to that for home-made bread, and allowed to stand over night.

Pretzels with salads instead of crackers, pretzels with coffee for breakfast, and pretzels with milk are all good combinations. Pretzels served with lemonade, or such carbonated drinks make a similar appeal to that of the traditional "pretzels and beer."

New uses for pretzels are continually being discovered. The pretzel undoubtedly has made for itself a permanent place in the American diet.

One of the strongest points in favor of pretzels is the fact that they call for real work from the teeth, and this work strengthens the teeth, brings blood to the gums and so keeps them healthy. This increases the flow of saliva, thus aiding in digestion, not only of the pretzels, but also of other food that is eaten with them.

This Little Lady has been Serving You Faithfully for Many Years "BREAKFAST" in Baker's Breakfast Cocoa

Means Something

The United States Food Standards define "Breakfast" cocoa as cocoa containing not less than 22½ per cent of cocoa butter. Many cheap cocoas (which cannot be labelled "Breakfast" Cocoa) contain not more than 14 per cent or 15 per cent of butter.

Baker's Breakfast Cocoa contains not less than 26 per cent of cocoa butter, almost one-fifth more than Government requirement. The phrase Baker's Breakfast Cocoa means a pure, delicious cocoa of high quality and possessing a considerable amount of nourishment.

JELLY TREES AND BUSHES THAT GROW FRUIT ALL YEAR

When the snow flies now the housewife can make jelly, and she can make it a great deal more easily than she once did only when the peach trees were heavy with fruit and dozens of fruits were heavy with juice.

The fruit comes all prepared, and after a minute or so of boiling with sugar and water, the glasses and molds are ready to set to cool, which means to jell.

There is grape, raspberry, strawberry, blackberry, pineapple, orange and mint—these jellies now can be "put up" on the most blustery and biting cold day of the year in exactly the amount the housewife wants for the next few days or weeks.

This is jelly sure and pure, with the full flavor of the fruit saved by the short boiling. This minute jelly saves hours and it saves dollars. An amount of jelly that ordinarily sells for a dollar and a half can be made for fifty cents, a third. Fully two-thirds of the old cost is saved in the selection and handling of the fruit.

So those "jelly" fruit trees and vines and berry bushes really bloom and bear all year for the housewife—in the sanitary kitchen where the highly concentrated fruit and berry juices are pasteurized and sealed for the home boiling which makes this jelly truly homemade.

Cooking experts and grocers report huge interest and success with this method already in wide use from coast to coast. In jelly making competitions users have carried off prizes with the minute jelly they have put up.

This jelly is clear as crystal. On the table the light goes right through it, spraying the beautiful natural fruit color on the cloth and chinaware, arousing admiration and appreciative comment.

Dozens of new "jelly" recipes now are becoming popular. This jelly is the perfect spread for bread, pancakes, toasts, tarts, and so on. The children justly regard it as a greater invention than the aeroplane.

They Never Tire of Chop Suey

Children as well as grown-ups like Chop Suey, the way Mother prepares it. Made at home with fresh vegetables and selected meats, it is both nourishing and delicious.

To get the real Chinese flavor, always use the genuine LaChoy Sauce. Your grocer sells it, together with LaChoy Sprouts, Water Chestnuts and Chow Mein Noodles.

Keep a stock of LaChoy ingredients handy on your pantry shelf. Simple directions on every package. Write for free book of Chinese recipes.

Belgians Swept Away With Love for Astrid

By ALICE LANGELIER.

Brussels, Nov. 8 (I.N.S.).—Out of the white North came Princess Astrid today—a picture of Nordic beauty, handsomely gowned in the white of her own North—to capture Belgium.

The future Crown Princess of Belgium, and probably future Queen of the Belgians, was given a reception that has never been equalled before in Belgium.

Wearing a chic coat of white velvet, trimmed with ermine, and a white toque, Princess Astrid was indeed beautiful and she rode by the side of her Crown Prince Leopold through the streets of Brussels. The throngs of Belgians were swept off their feet by their admiration for Princess Astrid and time and time again the crowds broke through the police lines, insisting that they carry Princess Astrid in triumph on their shoulders.

DRIVE CROWDS BACK.

Prince Leopold however, protected the Princess Astrid from her admirers, and with the aid of the police drove the crowds back behind the lines and proceeded to escort his Princess.

The capital was Astrid-mad. "Astrid cocktails" were being sold in the cafes, "Astrid stockings" were being sold in the shops.

Restaurants were dispensing Swedish soup which they assured their patrons was made according to the tastes of the Princess Astrid herself. Street vendors were doing a rushing business in the sale of postcards bearing the pictures of Princess Astrid.

Immediately after the arrival of the royal cortege at the royal palace, Princess Astrid was introduced formally to the president of the Belgian Chamber and Senate, all members of the government and to officials of the royal household.

LIKES "PAPA" JUNGBLUTH.

Princess Astrid seemed particularly impressed with Lieutenant General Jungbluth, adjutant general of the kingdom, now eighty years old. Prince Leopold and his brother and sister affectionately call the old general "Papa" Jungbluth.

An informal lunch in the royal palace followed, only the Belgian royal family and the Swedish members of the wedding party were present.

The entire party will attend a gala performance at the Royal Theatre De La Monnaz tonight. Included on the program will be the ballet from "Romeo and Juliet"—a fitting musical tribute to the picturesque romance of Leopold and Astrid.

'FALSE ARMISTICE DAY" PROPOSED AS MEMORIAL

Detroit, Nov. 8 (I.N.S.).—Eight years ago today America was sorrowful in realization that the armistice report of November 7 had been untrue, and now another memorial day may be added to the American calendar—"False Armistice Day."

Congressmen Robert H Clancy and Clarence J. McLeod, both of Detroit, are sponsoring an organization to commemorate the 20 000 American casualties in the World War between November 8 and November 11, 1918.

The organization to be known as the November Seventh Memorial Association, was proposed at a dinner here.

N. Y. CENTRAL PRESIDENT'S WIDOW, 53, WEDS MAN, 27

New York, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Maude Emery Smith, fifty-three, widow of Alfred H. Smith, who was president of the New York Central, is a bride. Her second husband is Harold P. Lo Beson, an interior decorator, twenty-seven. At sixteen Maude Emery of Adrian, Mich., married a section foreman who became head of a great railroad.

Mr. Smith, killed two years ago by a fall from a horse, left her 75 per cent of his income and his son the balance. Upon her death the son will receive the entire estate.

Real Velocity of Light

Chicago, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Albert A. Michelson, physicist of the University of Chicago, once stated that if he were successful in establishing the accurate velocity of light he would deem that achievement sufficient for the career of one scientist.

Today he took to the National Academy of Science at Philadelphia an announcement that light travels at the rate of 299,796 kilometers a second.

The old rate, as used in close scientific research, had been established at 299,860 kilometers a second, or 64 kilometers more than that determined by the Chicago scientist and Nobel prize winner.

Professor Michelson's measurement represents the result of a lifetime of research towards a goal that has engaged the attention of physicists for three centuries.

USES 5 SETS OF MIRRORS.

He spent all of last Summer in the mountains of California, flashing a beam of light from Mount Wilson to Mount San Antonia and back, a total distance of forty-four miles, using five different sets of revolving mirrors. The results in each set showed close agreement.

Reflecting the beams of light through a vacuum and noting the return home of the divided rays, it was found it made no difference whether the light was traveling with the earth or against the earth's speed. It traversed a given distance in the same length of time.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

USELESS CLUB FESTIVITIES on the eve of the big game commenced with a small dinner, and wound up in the small hours of the morning with a lively and small dance at the Brunswick. Mrs. George H. Whitney of Marlborough street wore a smart frock of canary yellow satin.

MISS DORA MITCHELL, a fair New Yorker who came over for the game and the Useless Club's various celebrations, was very lovely in black velvet. The frock carried the glint of rhinestones and furthermore was set off by a single fragile orchid of deep purple.

A BRIDE NEWLY COME TO TOWN, Mrs. Evans Spalding was in paisley tea rose silk. The bachelor set as exemplified by Useless Club members was happy indeed to capture Mrs. Spalding for their guest at the rate of 299,796 kilometers a second.

MESSRS. EVANS SPALDING, Tudor Simpkins, John Watson, George W. Whitney and others at the dinner were the merriest of youthful hosts. The Useless Club is a bachelor stronghold, and once a member exchanges single blessedness for matrimonial bonds, then does he cease to be an active member.

EVEN IN THE ALL-ABSORBING RUSH of bringing out a daughter successfully, Mrs. Joseph Daniels Leland of Brush Hill road, out in exclusive Milton, finds or makes the opportunity to interest herself actively in causes. She it is who heads a half hundred people banded to Welcome Dr. Annie Besant, theosophist of world-wide renown.

IT'S A VERY BRILLIANT BRAIN that handsome Mrs. Leland carries under her perfectly coiffed locks. A brain developed and trained in famous foreign salons, her own and others in the French capitol, where, as wife of an aristocrat, she moved for several years.

MISS LEONORA DEDONS DE PIERREFEU is the second daughter the former Elsa Tudor is introducing to society in the Tudor home city. Miss Dolores made her curtsy last Winter. The Besant advent is arranged for mid-November, and enthusiasts will gather at the shrine to be informed on many world problems.

BRIGHT HAREBELL blue is exactly the right color for Miss Ella DeT. Snelling, blue of eye as she is, and fair of skin. In such a frock she brightens the shopping promenade and gladdens the eye of every beholder. She wore the same bright color to Arlington Street Church for the Emmons-Weld bridal.

SHE AND HER BOON COMPANION, Mrs. John Mitchell (they have been inseparable always) seem to have some pleasant plan of travel in their pretty heads, judging from a very lively interest they show in bright colored travel folders and alluring literature of that sort.

WORLD CAPITALS AND SMART SPAS in both hemispheres are familiar playgrounds. So it would not be in the least surprising to hear that they are evolving something way off the beaten track and therefore proportionally exciting.

MISS VIRGINIA GARDNER, daughter of the Philip Gardners, was a very attractive member of the processional which passed up Grace Church aisle when Miss Cargie Winchester and J. Stewart Barney were married in Gotham. She wore mauve taffeta fashioned from a Watteau shepherdess design.

HER HAT SUGGESTED the tip-tilted affect associated with those airy French tapestry figures. Miss Gardner has a cameo-cut profile and slender figure, a quiet beauty that lingers ever so pleasantly in the mind.

THE HORACE BINNEYS drop into Newport now and then, even though the season has long since faded and the Avenue and other tree-shaded thoroughfares are deserted. They have been guests at the Hotel Viking. The Binneys are Newport property holders, so there's many an errand to take them there.

A HANDSOME YACHT, the Queen Mab, once the Eastern's flagship, now flies the Binney colors. And lying at anchor in Newport's spacious harbor, it was a pleasant place for Binney intimates to rendezvous. Indeed, Mr. and Mrs. Binney and their son, Horace Binney, Jr., really preferred living aboard ship rather than in their villa.

Summer Bachelors

A Frankly Revealing Serial of Boston Night Life

By WARNER FABIAN

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Derry Thomas, an attractive business girl, while shopping, permits Tony Landor, a young man whose name she has overheard but whom she does not know, pay for a dress fabric she cannot afford. He leaves her without learning her name. Mr. Ostrander, her employer, has her promise not to marry for three years. Derry goes autoing with Beverly Greenway. He admits he is a Summer bachelor. They meet Preston Smith, a Boston politician, at a North Shore club, and then go to a Boston night club. There Derry dances with several attractive men. Martin Cole calls at her office. Derry meets Willowdean French, an old friend. The latter dines with Professor Blakely, another Summer bachelor. Beverly goes away. Derry misses him. She meets Tony Landor unexpectedly. Derry warns Willowdean of Blakely and his hypnotism. Tony Landor calls at Derry's office.

CHAPTER XV.

"DO YOU mind telling me how you found this place, Mr. Landor?" asked Derry, trying to be quite impersonal. "We like to trace our channels of business."

"Through Walter Blakely. He is a friend of mine to whom I go for information about Boston. At my request he gave me a list of concerns which might handle such matters, and, as he said that he knew someone at Ostrander's, I came here first."

"Do you mean to say that you didn't really know that it was me?"

"There are so many Thomases in Derry," he pointed out.

Derry stamped, which was unbusinesslike, and added a look of grave surprise from the visitor. "Oh, do be human and answer my question."

"How human am I permitted to be?" Anyway, he was smiling now. She liked his smile. She liked it a lot.

"As human as you like."

"As human as on the bus?"

Now that he got started he was certainly going fast enough. A bit too fast perhaps. Very well, she would give him a little jolt. "If

The biggest mackerel catch for November known in the port was recorded today at the Fish Pier with the arrival of 712,000 pounds. Wholesale dealers cut the price to 6½ and 6 cents a pound.

Due to the flood and resultant drop in price, the schooner Bettina, with the high individual catch of 105,000 pounds, was sent to Gloucester, where her cargo will be salted and stored.

Among the 15 arrivals, the schooners Lucia with 90,000 pounds and the Little Joe with 65,000 pounds ranked next to the Bettina.

SUICIDE USES DYNAMITE

BLOWN TO PIECES BY EXPLOSIVE

Maine Man Kisses Children Good-by, Then Kills Self by Use of Dynamite

Ellsworth, Me., Nov. 8.—A career of easy money made in rum-running ended in tragedy today when Joseph Wood, after bidding good-bye to his three children, blew himself to pieces with a charge of dynamite.

Before prohibition Wood was a lobsterman here, living with his wife and three children, happy and respected. Then came the lure of easy money. The family prospered, bought an automobile, unthought of in the lobstering days, had money to spend, dressed well.

But happiness had flown out the window of the Wood home as riches entered. Mrs. Wood got a divorce from her husband and is now living in California. Two weeks ago he was arrested for driving his automobile while he was under the influence of liquor.

Then he was arrested on a charge of smuggling liquor into the United States. He was to face this charge in the Federal court at Bangor tomorrow.

Early today he went to the bedside of his two daughters and one son, Helen, fourteen; Dora, thirteen, and Sam, nine years old, awakened them and kissed each good-by.

Then he went out in his automobile and apparently set off the fuse attached to a stick of dynamite as he was driving along.

The car had been thrown ten feet from the roadside by the blast that shook buildings in this town and Wood's head was torn from his body.

PICKING JURY IN MURDER TRIAL

Five jurors had been selected today in Middlesex Superior Court to try William C. Moir of Burlington, charged with the murder of Fredrick Clements, Burlington garage man, on Sept. 17, 1924. The case opened today before Judge David A. Lourie, and is the first of six murder trials on the current docket.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Bishop represented the government and Attorney John P. Feeney headed a large array of counsel for the defense. It is expected the jury, drawn from a special panel of 240 veniremen, will be completed by night, following which it will be taken to the scene of the murder, then locked up for the night.

According to the prosecution, the body of Clements was found in the Shawsheen River, trussed with wire and weighed down with spare auto parts. Hallie Mowbray, eighteen, of Burlington, was tried and acquitted.

Moir was arrested in New York, charged with the murder, and returned to this State to await trial.

The first five jurors chosen were: Sylvanus Smith, Newton, salesman; Carl E. Watts, Arlington, production manager; Stanley W. Morton, Everett, gardener; Robert W. Humphrey, Everett, electrician, and George D. Lawson, Weston, farmer.

Twa Braw Boys in Fight With Police; Held By Court

'Twas a braw brecht necht last Saturday necht, the necht of the dance out to Winslow Hall, Warren street, Roxbury, and since neither of the braw Scot boys, Angus and Ian MacDonald, had his claymore with him the twa were worsted in the battle that ensued between them and the police.

Accordingly, Angus and Ian were hailed into Roxbury Court today to face a variety of charges. Drunkenness was the first, and disturbing a public assembly the second. In addition Ian was charged with defacing the coat of Patrolman Goodman, said coat being the property of the city of Boston.

Both pleaded not guilty. They were held in $500 each to face court on November 12.

"Once it is decided to resume the U-boat warfare against England without restrictions it is of course impossible to say that difficulties of a serious nature with the United States of America will not result from it.

"But the United States had not been favorable to us from the very outset. The feeling of racial relationship of the leading part of the population toward England and also the constantly increasing amalgamation of British and American economic interests were bound to create sympathy with England.

"Nevertheless, the American government had at first professed neutrality. For instance, munitions were furnished at first, not directly, but by way of Portland.

WOMAN'S BODY IN COAL BIN

Flushing, N. Y., Nov. 8 (U. HELD IN 'PLOT' TO GET $750

An alleged attempt to "shake down" the nephew of a Rhode Island Republican leader was frustrated by police of Milk street station with arraignment in Municipal Court today of Graham Hunter of Denver, charged with attempting to extort $750 from Standish Howland. He was held in $2,000.

Howland testified that the two met at Boston Y. M. C. A. several weeks ago and that after his return to Rhode Island he received five letters, all apparently from Hunter, and one signed with Hunter's name. These letters, said Howland, threatened to tell his family certain things that the writer considered discreditable if the money was not sent.

BUT IT'S HIS OWN AND FOR CHARITY

The Commonwealth's chief executive turned "check raiser" before he departed for Europe. He decided the $1,000 he gave the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary wasn't enough, so he "raised" his check to $10,000, and wrote that a visit to the institution would convince anyone of its great service. Miss Dorothy A. Nass is shown holding the $10,000 check.

ADVERTISING MEN DISCUSS FUTURE OF N. E.

Worcester, Nov. 8 (A P.)—Nearly 500 delegates representing the sixteen member organizations of the New England Advertising Clubs united into Worcester early today for the two-day convention that opened at 11 a. m. in the Chamber of Commerce Hall following registration at the Bancroft Hotel, which is convention headquarters.

Among the delegates are about 50 women. A special entertainment program has been arranged and when will include a sightseeing trip with a visit to Henry Ford's Wayside Inn.

Today's session was called to order by John W. Longsworth of Hartford, chairman of New England ad vertising clubs. President George B. Dyer of the Worcester club will give the address of welcome.

His fellow A C K Woodridge of New York head of the International Advertising Association, and the first speaker after the noon luncheon. The Economic and Industrial Future of New England."

Other speakers were Marcus Dunn of the Cape Cod Cranberry Company, Herbert Metz a secretary manager of the Graybar Company of New York and Walter S. Applebee, advertising counselor at Montreal. Col. Mr. Metz will talk on "Launching the Industrial Concern," and Mr. Applebee will talk on "Dealer Cooperation, How to Get It and How to."

George F. Booth, publisher of the Worcester Telegram will be toastmaster tonight at the banquet in Bancroft Hotel.

The speakers tomorrow forenoon will include Amos Parish, special writer on advertising, Allyn Mayhew, New England manager for the Barton, Durstine & Osborn Company of Boston; Harry Kirkland, advertising counselor of New York; Neil Borden, assistant dean of the graduate department of Harvard University and Joseph Ewing of Lincoln, banks & Ewing, advertising agents of New York.

The final session will be tomorrow afternoon when reports will be read and officers elected.

Miss Ida Hicks, recently named "Miss Plainfield" in a beauty contest sponsored by the Plainfield Advertising Club will be present. The convention slogan will be "More New England Prosperity Through More Effective Advertising."

GIVE BIG SUM TO EYE AND EAR INFIRMARY

Although the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary campaign for funds does not begin officially until Friday, over $500,000 in gifts have been received at headquarters at 100 Milk street.

Two gifts received special expressions of gratitude at the campaign headquarters today. One was a check of $1000 sent by a messenger from the other Fuller. The other was $7 in cash from William Pelkham, an ade in at the infirmary, who gave up his salary of $14 a week and pledged $1 7 to be paid in a year.

Governor Fuller first pledged $1,000, but later raised his gift to $10,000. In a letter accompanying the check he wrote:

"One has only to visit this institution to realize the great service it is performing among the poor and destitute. Here thousands of little children, born into the world blind or with their sight dim, have had their normal vision restored. Surely it is a wonderful privilege to have the opportunity to share in this work."

At a dinner at the Chamber of Commerce Building, given for those working in the drive, further expressions will be announced.

SPEND $792,000 ON PHONE WORK

An additional appropriation of $792,995 was voted today by the executive committee of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. for new construction and improvements in plant, bringing the total appropriation thus far this year to $25,771,927.

Of the new money provided, $85,-850 will be spent in Greater Boston, $36,200 in Attleboro, $62,437 in Easthampton, $5,856 in Groton, $5,267 in Plainville and Sterling, $166,326 in Springfield, $71,309 in Rockland and $5,164 in Beverly.

The balance will be expended in other parts of the New England territory.

ENDS LIFE IN PORCH CHAIR

Seated in a chair on the front veranda of his home, No. 23 Brahms street, West Roxbury, Richard P. H. Milmer, sales tour, aged and killed himself today while his wife was busy with household duties inside.

The sound of the shot never penetrated through the house to her, but running to the veranda, where she found him slumped down in his chair with a bullet hole in the left temple and the 32-calibre revolver still clutched in his nerveless hand.

Police ruled him to be the victim of ill health, and a note found on his person confirmed their opinion.

Mrs. Milmer told the police her husband had been under the doctor's care for some time and had been despondent. She asked him to dispose of the revolver a number of weeks ago and believed he had done so.

Harvard in Huddle ~ And Coming Out of Huddle ~ In Game with Princeton

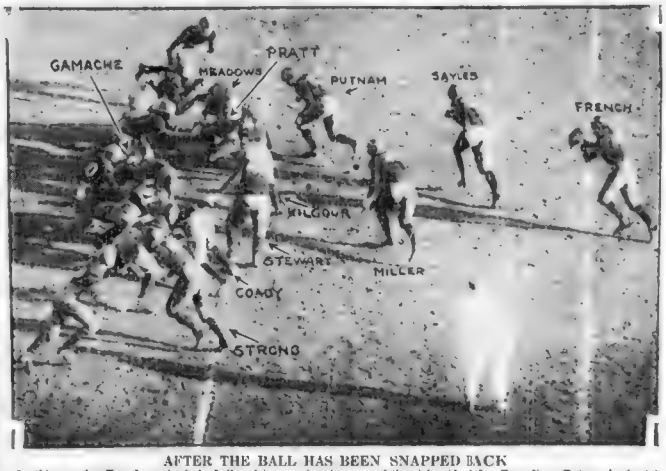
HOW IT STARTS
It will be noticed that the players so huddled fall out of the conference and hop the to their positions without the loss of any time. Each player knows his position when the signal is called as he does his place in the Crimson line.



AFTER THE BALL HAS BEEN SNAPPED BACK
On this occasion French received the ball and is seen charging toward the right side of the Tiger line. Putnam is about to take out Moseer, Tiger left end, while Miller and Sayles act as interference in the effort to gain. These remarkable photographs were taken during the course of the Princeton-Harvard game by a Boston Evening American staff photographer, and shows step by step, the methods used by Coach Horween in his interpretation of the much-discussed huddle.

AFTER THE SECRET HAS BEEN UNFOLDED
Centre Gamache is first to pull away and take his position over the ball, followed by the rest of the team, who advance in fanlike formation. Notice the backfield players assume the same position after the breakup as they would were signals called

YALE HIT BY STORM OF ABUSE

Students, Alumni and Press Take Rap at Old Eli System

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 8.—Howls against Yale's present football methods were voiced from several sources today.

There was a public protest against Yale's action in using only substitutes against Maryland Saturday. One came from the students, against continuing secret practice. In another Yale students, alumni and the public joined, asserting that Yale football should be investigated because for the first time three games have been lost in a row, none of them to Harvard or Princeton, without Yale being able to once score.

While the coaches feel that Yale's showing will be satisfactory against Harvard and Princeton, the feeling here was today as critical regarding the general situation that the Quinnipiack and Union League clubs, the largest in New Haven, cancelled their reservations for special cars on the special train which will be run from here Saturday.

A report that a wholesale return of tickets of both the Yale-Harvard and Yale-Princeton games had today occurred was denied at the Yale athletic department.

TICKET SALE OVER TOP.

The Yale authorities insisted that Yale's entire allotment of 23,000 tickets for the game in Princeton had been oversubscribed by alumni and that the Yale management was now putting hard effort on the 2000 from thousands of Yale men which could not be filled from the supply.

For the Harvard game the ticket situation was today declared to be even more acute. It is known that hundreds of Yale men have found themselves unable to pay the $5 demanded for the tickets to the game with Princeton and Harvard this year, making another block of tickets which is available for the management to dispose of in addition to those distributed to the coaching staffs and what Yale's 27 gent gridiron squads.

To add to the complications the Yale management today began to learn of acts of some local ticket agents in putting through speculations to those from the Yale legs of luggage at last year's Princeton and Harvard games.

Deception Pays And Makes Hit | New Method Smart Wild Rumors Fans Like 'Em

BLUFF, WHEN GOOD, GOES OVER BIG

CLEVER deception, when there's nothing dishonest about it, wins as much praise as any other single thing in this dizzy universe. Bill Roper is now being lauded as the keenest of all the coaches, because he sold the world the idea that his star back, Jake Slagle, was too crippled to play against Harvard. And the world smiles, as it cheers, appreciating fully the humor of the situation. Mister Roper did almost the same thing with his great dodger last Fall, but he has a touch of genius in everything and spreads his propaganda just as he does his football knowledge. The bluff is as old as football, but the boys go to it with more finesse than used to be the case. Years ago the casualty list of the Yale team, with Harvard somewhere in the offing, looked like a Monday morning police record. The burly heroes all played in various games, but were fatally wounded just before the whistle ended the carnage.

Nick Flatley

This was all taken with a large dash of doubt. Though it did at times influence student opinion enough to make the betting on the big games change. Nowadays, they handle their faux pirating carefully. Slagle played less than an hour of football all year, so it was natural enough to believe that he was really hurt. He may have had some slight injury, but it was a great thing for his team and himself.

It handed Harvard the idea that Jake, who had been a pest for two football games in preceding years, was finally out of the way. And the Crimson never could get over the shock when Jake popped up, just as good as new, if not a little better.

PRINCETON ROOTERS BROKE THE HARVARD STUDENTS AS WELL AS THE GOAL POSTS.

The boys who throw away their hats at football games have really nothing important to cover with them.

WILD YARNS ALWAYS GO WITH SPORTS

RUMOR can travel faster than Jake Slagle. A humorous Harvard publication had Bill Roper passing out in an apoplectic seizure Saturday. And the word ran through the big crowd like wildfire. Half a dozen amateur reporters came rushing up to the press box with the news, after the game. Hundreds of Princeton men gathered at the locker building, alarmed by the yarn.

Bill was amused and proved that he isn't irked by not saying that the report was grossly exaggerated. There's usually something of the sort sprinkled about at all big sporting events. During the last World Series a story went round violently one night that Babe Ruth had been badly hurt in an automobile accident.

In 1914, the gossipers had Johnny Evers seized with an appendicitis attack the night before the series opened. A dozen different things were supposed to happen to Jack Dempsey in the last few hours before his Tunney fight. Probably Jack wishes now that some of them had, but that's apart. The sport fan loves gloomy gossip and must have it, even if he has to make it up. It adds to the gaiety of nations, but gives the poor reporters a little extra detective work that they don't need in the least.

PRETTY SOON the good football teams will be passing Yale up as too soft for anything but early practice games.

Greatest Golf Shot That I Ever Saw

As Told to Jack Koford

By BILL REEKIE

Metropolitan Amateur Champion

PICKING out the greatest golf shot I ever saw is a difficult task, since I have played the game and watched it for so many years both in this country, and on the other side of the water.

There is, however, one that sticks in my mind as so masterly that it cannot be obliterated by other wonderful shots I've seen. It was made by Jerry Travers some years ago. Travers, you'll remember, won four amateur and one open championships in the heyday of his career. But I'll wager he never made a finer shot in any of his victories than he did in a foursome that I recall.

It had reached the eighteenth hole, all square. The hole was a par 4, some 375 yards in length. A scrawny remnant of a creek about 100 yards from the green. The fairway slanted down toward this water, and from its further side continued up a hill toward the putting carpet.

Travers smashed a beautiful drive straight down the alley. It was mid-summer, the ground well baked. The ball took so long a roll that it hopped over the creek and lodged in the mud just short of the far bank. The others were short, and all chipped safely to the green.

Now, the most difficult part of Jerry's position was the fact that if he played the ball, he not only had a terrible lie, but an almost impossible stance. His left foot could find solid support against the bank, but his right must be almost knee deep in the creek.

Still, he was not satisfied to drop back and take the penalty. Travers was none of your "safety-first" lads. If there was a chance to make the shot he intended doing it. So, into the creek he went, and took his stance.

Got that position in mind. The ball was partly imbedded in the ooze. Travers was deep in the water with his right foot, with his left foot propped against the bank. His stance was necessarily an awkward one, and awkwardness is reflected in the swing.

He ripped into his ball with his mashie-niblick and it tore into the mud with such force that he was splattered with the muck from head to heels. But the ball shot cleanly out, straight for the pin. It hit within four feet of the hole, where the backspin held it almost station ary.

And then Travers very coolly climbed the hill, and sank his putt for a birdie. I have seen wonderful recoveries before, but never one, I think, made from such a terrible lie and under such inauspicious conditions. It won the match, of course, but even that was secondary to the splendid courage that Jerome Travers showed.

LANE TO REMAIN ON BOXING COMMISSION

By JACK CONWAY

DAN LANE will be reappointed as a member of the Boxing Commission when Gov. Fuller returns from his vacation in Europe. This will be sad news for the army of office seekers who have an idea they are eminently qualified to regulate boxing in Massachusetts.

Lane and Eugene Buckley have been the working members of the Commission. The boxing law imposes the duties of chairman of the Commission on Col. Foote of the Department of Public Safety. As the Colonel has a hundred or so other State jobs which various legislatures have wished on him, and usually without an additional compensation, Lane and Buckley have been permitted to govern the young men who afold serious contact with manual labor by keeping in close touch with the dear old bovine racket.

Lane's term as Commissioner expired last September. Since then he has been functioning as a hold over. There is no reason why he should not be reappointed other than the fact some of our worthy citizens would like his civic standing and the incidental salary that goes with the position of Boxing Commissioner. As a Boxing Commissioner, Lane has been highly successful.

Jack Conway

LANE'S friendship for Attorney Charles H. Innes, Republican leader and close personal friend of President Coolidge, is one of the reasons why those young men seeking his job and SALARY hoped to have him removed. The claim that Innes and Fuller do not attend the same tea parties. These gentlemen failed to consider that the Republican leaders do not permit their personal feeling to interfere with the welfare of the party machine.

Then if memory serves me right Lane was appointed to the Boxing Commission by former Governor Channing Cox, still a very powerful figure in the Republican party and a possible candidate against David I. Walsh two years hence.

Please don't worry about the future of Dan Lane, spend the time trying to improve yourself.

HONEYBOY Finnegan will do the boxing part of his training for his battle with Chick Suggs on Next Monday night at a gym in Lowell. Finnegan is living at Martin Flaherty's health farm at Wamesit. He will do his road work at Wamesit, but each afternoon he will motor to Lowell, three miles away, and do his boxing at the same gym where Al Mello works out.

I have been asked to rate the heavyweights. Here is my list: Gene Tunney, Jack Sharkey, Jack Delaney, Jack Dempsey, Paul Berlenbach, Jim Maloney, Jack Renault, George Godfrey, Harry Wills, Harry Persson.

How do YOU class the big boys? Let us hear from you.

TOM GOODWIN gives us the following classifiest of featherweights:

Finnegan and Suggs (take your pick), Red Chapman, Benny Bass, Sammy Fuller.

Maybe some will agree with him.

Harvard Squad Hit By Player Injuries

"If his rib isn't broken it's just as badly injured as if it were broken. He will not be able to play against Brown."

WORK FOR REGULARS.

French, whose work throughout the game was pleasing to the coaches, got cracked on the head nearly every time he carried the ball and is consequently in a somewhat dazed condition. Captain Caulkins, endeavoring to check the fierce charge of the Nassau linemen, was the recipient of a severe manhandling of the sort that only an unused lineman can get. Both he and French, however, are expected to come around by the end of the current week.

Work will go on in Cambridge in its regular course until the end of the season. There will be no stunt pulled against the Bears such as was pulled against Maryland. Harvard's regulars, all those who are whole, will fight it out with the Mcelwain clan, and they will be drilled this week to expect another afternoon as strenuous as that provided by Roper's contingent.

It is fair to say, of course, that Harvard's objective now is Yale. But the team cannot afford, under any light, to pass the Bruins over summarily. To effect a successful year the Crimson team must subdue both of its remaining opponents, and that is precisely what the coaching regime is working to accomplish.

"Harvard played an awful dumb game in some ways," Horween acknowledged. "We didn't capitalize Princeton's mistakes and we had plenty of our own. Our line was outplayed, but I expected the Tiger line to be good in spite of predictions to the contrary. We still have a lot to learn."

TOUGH SPOT FOR SOPHS.

In criticizing Harvard's showing it is not amiss to call attention to the fact that the burden of responsibility on this Crimson team falls almost entirely upon the youthful and inexperienced shoulders of sophomores. It is a situation which always is disastrous for the present while augurning much for the future. There is no position quite as gruelling mentally as that of a sophomore football player, in his first big game, realizing that upon him rests an important objective.

One short year of football behind these men and they will have acquired the necessary confidence. And with that confidence gained the experience is absorbed much easier. But Harvard this season has been faced with that problem—upon the sophomores the burden. It is hardly just to expect miracles from them.

In the meantime, Harvard's noncommittal coaches are spending the time in which they might be taking in working. They know the weaknesses of their team. They are striving to erase them from the string.

Horween was asked for a forecast of the coming fortnight.

"Brown is a great team," he announced—he hoped preparatory to a meaty dissertation. "So is Yale, against Harvard . . . well, I guess I'll eat . . ."

TREAT ENJOYS GREAT DAY

Herb Treat, the Boston Evening American football expert, had nine winners, three losers and one tie in the week-end gridiron clashes. His best prediction—that Princeton would defeat Harvard, 17 to 10, was among the REAL surprises of the day.

Most of the experts and all the wiseacres had the Crimson to win and Harvard went into the fray a popular choice to win

Treat came within three points of picking the actual score of the Bow-Tie College-Villanova combo. He had Boston College winning, 16 to 7 and Notre Dame-Carnegie's charges "run it over," 19 to 7. Clever pickin' that.

Treat—and all the rest of the experts—got tripped up on the Yale-Maryland game when stubborn Ted Jones, coach of Old Eli, kept a team of substitutes playing against the Southerners in the face of inevitab'e defeat.

New York University, by its 6 to 0 defeat of Carnegie Tech and the hometown, with a 13 to 7 triumph over Syracuse, provided other upsets. The Fordham-Holy Cross tie game, also was something in the nature of a surprise package.

B. C. HIGH CUTS LEOMINSTER OFF SCHED

By EDDIE DONDERO.

"Boston College High has played its last game with Leominster on the gridiron," declared Jack Heaphy, Eaglet mentor today. "Playing eleven men and being stoned by the gallery gods is expensive amusement but the miserable reception handed my proteges by the pitiful up-State is not enjoyable," he continued.

"The break in athletics came following a whitewash the Maroon and Gold handed Leominster over the week-end. It didn't meet with the approval of the "Get 'Em Boys" who threatened us with everything but rice guns.

Eddie Dondero

"With but one minute to play it rained rocks on our bench, fortunately nobody was hurt. Clean football was displayed by both clubs and the officials who were more to be pitied than jeered had to be escorted from the playing surface by a score of policemen.

"Then the fun began. Play that crowd again next year, I guess not," Heaphy told the writer.

Those acquainted with Boston College's former phenomenal center know that he doesn't often complain.

No reflection is being cast on the Leominster football team or its athletic directors by Coach Heaphy. He does not hold them responsible for what happened.

Tunney Tells of Trip To Battle Scene Through Air

CHAPTER THIRTY

This is the thirtieth chapter of Gene Tunney's own story—written by himself—of his life and fighting career, written exclusively for the Boston Evening American.

By GENE TUNNEY

World's Heavyweight Champion.

I FLEW from my Stroudsburg camp to the Sesqui-Centennial ringside in Philadelphia on Sept. 23, the afternoon of the fight. Casey Jones, a raring-to-go aviator, was my pilot. That flight sent my followers into a panic and added ten years to Tex Rickard's age.

Looking back, I realize that the airplane trip a few hours before I was to step into the ring against a great Champion was an action inspired by foolish thought. Its results might well have been tragic.

As it was, the fumes of the exhaust and the rocking motion of the plane when we went into bumpy atmosphere made me quite wobbly and my legs were still shaking as I climbed dizzily from the plane at the League Island landing field, twenty minutes before I was scheduled for the weighing in ceremonies.

I had made up my mind to take the plane trip some three weeks ahead of the contest. I thought the five-hour jaunt by either automobile or train would be too monotonous and too tiring.

Knowing, however, that such an announcement of my plans would bring a storm of protest from Billy Gibson and Tex Rickard, I took but one friend into my confidence. He is a Cleveland newspaper man

I remembered when the Post [illegible] the death of two of the crew. My friend came to my with the press accounts of that tragedy and exclaimed:

"Now look, Gene and tell me you are going to have sense enough to ride to Philadelphia by train instead of in a plane."

But despite my friend's plea, nothing could persuade me to cancel the plane trip. But I tell you I wished I had taken his advice ten minutes after the plane had left Stroudsburg. When I finally arrived at Philadelphia, I was a tired and sick young man.

The big crowd could be heard from my dressing room as I [illegible] with my pals there. But I was not excited. Ten minutes before I was called to the ring, a most absurd scene occurred in my room. I still don't know how to figure it out. It was this:

Referee Reilly Warns of Boxing Rules

The referee of the bout, Tommy Reilly, a short, chunky chap, came in accompanied by Frank Weiner, chairman of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission. Mr. Weiner introduced Reilly, who said he wanted to discuss the rules with me. As there had been conferences between my representatives and Dempsey's a day or [illegible] before, I thought this strange and said as much. I also added:

"I am very well acquainted with the rules. Is there any change?"

How about the rabbit punch?"

"Barred," replied Reilly.

"How about the kidney blow?"

"Barred."

"Then," I said, "I'm satisfied. Are you going to enforce those rules?"

Reilly then replied

"Yes, I am going to enforce them. I want you," with a very firm accent on the "you", "to know that this is not to be a pink tea. This fight is going to be an honest one and I don't WANT ANY COMPLAINTS OR ALIBIS FROM THE LOSER."

I was flabbergasted. What did this sort of talk mean? I tried hard to keep my temper and succeeded. I managed to say:

"What do you mean?"

Reilly replied:

"I'm telling YOU that I'm in there to have an honest fight and you both will be treated as though you were gentlemen to me."

"Well," I said, still trying to figure what this man was attempting to pull, "you ARE a stranger to me. And, what is more, you go and tell Mr. Dempsey just what you told me."

Tunney Plays With Jack O'Brien

I think if he had told this sort of thing to Dempsey he might have been thrown out on his ear, big fight, big purse or not. It was the funniest psychology I ever ran against. The having a [illegible] to me of the principals and suggest by inference that [illegible] was going into the arena to get killed.

That talk about "no complaints and no alibis" made me feel pretty bumptious at the time. However, I cooled down and Jimmy Bronson and Bill McCabe will tell you that I leaned back in my chair and slept for ten minutes.

I was the first in the ring. I got quite a hand and responded to a few of my sports writer friends and others near my corner. Dempsey followed I [illegible] about four or five minutes later.

We had been given as many rolls of gauze as we wanted and a yard of white adhesive tape. While I was taping my hands, I kept the life out of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, one of Dempsey's handlers, and also one of the [illegible] and most able seconds of [illegible].

I would make bet that I was [illegible] while taping them, and I had Philadelphia Jack between [illegible] to one or the other.

(Tomorrow I will tell you of the fight.)

Liability Over Tuberculosis Cut in Half

By CHAS. A. L. REED, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association

THE liability of you and your family to tuberculosis is only about half what it was fifteen years ago, although I have not the exact figures for the United States before me at this writing.

I, however, have before me a contribution by Sir Arthur Newsholme (London Lancet) as to progress made in England, a progress that may be taken as an index of our own country.

This writer states that although the death rate from tuberculosis of the lungs has decreased in England since 1871 from 2.23 per thousand to 0.84, a decrease of 62 per cent, tuberculosis nevertheless continues to be one of the chief causes of death and perhaps the most frequent source of adult disability, as well as the chief factor in producing dependent widows and children.

Like cancer, tuberculosis kills more than half its victims during the working years of their life, from twenty to sixty five, but tuberculosis kills 37 per cent under sixty-five, while cancer only kills 80 per cent.

The death rate in England has been considerably reduced in the last ten years, except for the age periods of twenty to twenty-five in women. The mortality at this period is undoubtedly due to promiscuity and the increasing migration of young people from rural communities to large towns, where tuberculosis is more prevalent.

Although the figures of child mortality are much less than they were and deaths from tuberculosis between birth and five years are not so frequent, the number of victims is still enormous, and one of the most urgent problems of public health and of general medical practice is how to minimize risks of infection during the first five and especially during the first two years of life. The removal of risk from infected milk only covers a fraction of the danger, for most children suffer from a tuberculosis which is not pulmonary, and of which only a minority of cases are caused by infected milk.

It is important to continue and extend precautions against infection from this source, but the bulk of the problem will not be solved alone by this precaution. It seems probable that an infant at birth is like a member of a swan race; he has not yet acquired any immunity.

Why do certain children survive and others die of tuberculosis in the same mixed community and even in the same family?

This may be explained by assuming that the result depends on how many times the child has been subjected to infection, and what was the intensity of that infection.

A child who encounters slight infections, we are informed, develops its own immunity, but one who is severely infected early in life will die or remain permanently injured by the disease.

Poor, Little, Plain, the Girl Who Tried to Be Agreeable

By WINIFRED BLACK

THERE they were in the smart Irish restaurant—the man and the two women.

They sat at the table next to me, and before we had been in the place one minute I began to wonder if I could not bribe the waiter to spill something on the man—hot soup preferably. And ice water on the woman—the pretty woman with the dazzling earrings and the smart brush bob and the smile of condescending superiority.

Only it was no use thinking of the ice water, for this particular restaurant is in London, and when you ask for ice water with your dinner or have your breakfast you are looked upon as a crude out lander, don't you know.

The waiter was quite hopeless. He never would have guessed what I meant. Hints would mean nothing in the world to him. You would have to draw a man and put it all down in writing and sign on the dotted line, or he would not have the faintest idea what you were going to say, good honest soul, with his mind fixed on tripe and whiting and mustard and bitters.

But the man at the table really did need a little attention—he certainly did. He was rather a good-looking man, very smartly dressed, and the woman with him was smartly dressed, too, and she would have been pretty if she had not looked as if she were sound asleep most of the time.

The other woman was not pretty at all. She was plain, but she had such an eager, vivid, hopeful face and such a pair of deep wistful eyes! Not so very well dressed, not so awfully prosperous looking—some sort of a poor relation, there—is not a doubt of that.

The man was determined to make her keep her place! And so was the woman with the dangling earrings. And yet the story of the three people was written all over them in letters that the slowest mind could read.

Beauty was the younger sister. Plain was the older sister, and, dear me, how Plain has worked and sacrificed and suffered for Beauty.

Plain works for her living, and rather a good living she makes too, for she has energy and ambition and brains, has Plain.

But she has never been able to save a penny. You see, Beauty has always been delicate—not ill exactly, but not quite "up to" work of any sort. She can make her own frocks when she has to, and save her own hair and do her own nails, and shop for her own smart slippers and the pretty scarfs she makes such a point to wear—but she is a beauty, and beauties must always be looked at.

Plain looked after Beauty and Beauty caught a husband, and Beauty have been traveling on the Continent, and Beauty managed to get Plain invited to dinner. Then slipped into the little restaurant that is only just smartish and not smart, and while they were about it they showed Plain just where she belonged—distinctly in the background.

Poor Plain tried so hard. She made hopeful little jokes, and brother-in-law stared and sister would not even smile. She asked questions and was not even answered.

Poor Plain! She was so happy and so eager when she came into the place, and when she left, Beauty and husband exchanged looks over Plain's head. Poor Plain will never be asked out with them again.

Not unless she saves some money and gets on a bit herself. Poor Plain! I hope she does not realize the situation.

I wish I had knocked the water bottle over when I went past the table.

It would have been fun to see Beauty and her husband not an inch apart and so superior—for a few minutes anyhow.

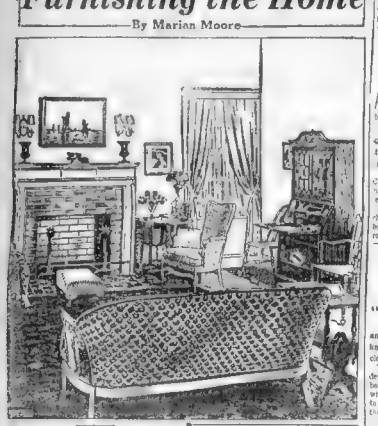
Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore



DO not be afraid of colors. A neutral scheme results in a negative room; it saves one from blunders but seldom achieves individuality. The pattern on the back of this davenport is a fine tonic for the toneless room and constitutes a ready-out arrangement, that is to say the placing of the couch and end table away from the wall and opposite the fireplace, with the decoration radiating towards the wall from these two centres.

This scheme, however, is not always advisable and should not be used when the room is less than 14 feet wide. Even in large rooms care must be taken that an attractive picture should be presented from every entrance door.

If the room is small and there is a blank wall section exactly opposite the fireplace, the arrangement suggested here may be adopted, with the difference that the couch will be right on, against the wall.

Suitable Gifts for the Little Folks

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

AS the holiday season approaches millions of grownups are wondering about a suitable book for the little children they love. Of all the gifts that the average child receives, it is the good story book that dents him longest.

Mrs. Elsa H. Naumburg of the Child Study Association of America has recently compiled a most excellent list of books for children.

She says in her foreword "The child needs a mirror of life. Poor books and poor pictures are mirrors with distorting flaws, while good books and pictures furnish insight and direct him inner of growth.

Joyous rhymes and jingles for the little tots and merry animal stories that will make him laugh are always in favor.

The little fellow of kindergarten age is interested in whatever pertains to ships, wagons, trains, engines, airplanes, motors and fire engines. He wants to know about farmers, shepherds, soldiers and the workmen who supply his food and clothes and playthings.

And then come the fairy tales But those that induce a feeling of pain or fear or horror should be avoided Fairy stories that develop the imagination and the creative ability and those that carry lessons of love and kindness and respect are always wanted.

Do you recall the effect your reading matter had upon you when you were a child? Do you remember how you wept over the trials of your favorite heroine? How the noble deeds of your hero inspired you so that you fairly ached for a chance to sacrifice yourself for another? Do you remember the softening influence, the subdued sort of feeling, the intense desire "to be good" that certain of your books brought to you? Perhaps you can trace your most lasting lessons in truth and honor to the pages of a certain book that you enjoyed. Many people can—and many of them lacked that opportunity.

"I was starved for something to read when I was a child," said a certain literary woman, "and about the only books I had were 'How' 'ollo Learned to Work' and 'The Hard-Hearted Woman.' One was a baby book and the other was vile."

Most girls and boys have an age—somewhere between ten and fifteen—when they pine and yearn, and long for interesting books. To spend a rainy afternoon, alone and undisturbed with an absorbing story is a wonderful piece of luck in their estimation. And if that story carries subtle suggestions of right living and right-thinking it will do much toward that child's character building.

For the older boys and girls there are more and more desirable books and more and more undesirable ones published every year. And it is during the grammar school years that young people's standards are fixed and their characters molded. Parents do take time to examine the books their children read and make sure that they are helpful as well as entertaining in using a quality influence for good at very small cost.

Sleep Helps Beauty

By MARIA JERITZA.

"PLAY, sleep and a hobby"

These three aids to health and beauty are listed by a well-known physician as preventives of old age.

The modern woman wishes and is determined to retain all her charm, beauty and sense of well-being which means youth. Mothers like to be mistaken for older sisters of their daughters—and often are.

Most of us realize how greatly recreation aids us in keeping young and well, so we crowd all we can of it into our busy lives. Likewise most of us have a hobby nowadays whether it be horseback riding, bridge, collecting antiques or a flower garden. Whatever the hobby may be, it gives a stimulating interest to our leisure hours.

But the third ingredient in this youth-and-beauty formula is seen in by far more interesting and is too often neglected—we fail to get beauty sleep.

There's so much to be done that is more important than sleeping away the hours, that the average woman crowds a thousand and one interests into her life, which in turn crowd out sleep.

I know a woman who retires early enough to permit precious hours of beauty sleep before midnight. But she reads in bed until all hours. Once she read all night. Is it any wonder there are deep circles and bags of flesh underneath her eyes?

Another young girl of my acquaintance fills her evenings to the brim. One night she goes to a dance, the next she takes a singing lesson, while a third evening is given over to feverishly sewing on a new frock or pretty lingerie—and so on.

Never is one evening given to a restful health and beauty regime, and bed by 9 or 10 o'clock. She must go early because she is an office worker and commuter. This girl is still in her early twenties, yet her fresh loveliness is beginning to fade. Lack of sleep is a short cut to old age.

To a great extent sleeplessness is a habit. You can, if you permit yourself to do so, acquire the habit of lying awake at night, thinking and worrying.

If you do not sleep well, ask yourself what the cause may be. Are you drinking too much tea and coffee? It will pay you to omit them from your diet.

You may include too much rich food, sweets and starches in your meals, causing gas and intestinal indigestion. Very likely you fail to get enough fresh air.

Fads and Fashions

Interesting in Vests—Is a safe investment for the Winter, for many tailored frocks will be worn with delightful vestees, especially of washable radium tucked in wide or narrow effects. Boyish or convertible V collars are equally correct in these smartly tailored fronts.

Those Seeking Monotony — Can achieve a monotone effect by matching their Fall frock with exactly the same shade of chiffon hose. Stockings are being shown in all of the red, green, brown and blue tones now being featured in costumes.

Seeking Hidden Treasure Is intensely interesting especially if we can grub for brown purses. "Treasure Island Calf," which is a mono tone suede, marked to represent a pirate's map, is the latest Parisian fad for handbags of all shapes and sizes.

An Infinite Variety—Is expressed by the fashions in the English sport hose of silk and wool mixture. Zig zag stripes are greatly favored, and so are plaid, striped and diamond effects. Two and three-toned color combinations are artistically blended

Keep Eliminative System Active

Proper Functioning of Blood Filters Essential to Good Health.

GOOD health is largely a matter of good elimination. To be well, one must not only provide the bodily machinery with proper food, rest and exercise, but must keep the eliminative system active in the removal of food and tissue "ashes"—poisonous waste products of bodily combustion.

It is the function of the kidneys to keep the blood-stream free from these toxic materials. But sluggish function permits retention of some of this poisonous waste and as a result, one is apt to feel listless, tired and achy. A dull, nagging backache is sometimes a symptom, with drowsy headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not functioning just as they should is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions.

More and more people are recognizing the value of assisting the kidneys at such times with a stimulant diuretic.* Doan's Pills have established a nation-wide reputation in these conditions. Users everywhere recommend them. Ask your neighbor!

*Diuretics are agents which increase the secretion of the kidneys.—Encyclopedia definition.

The SECRET STUDIO

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

A Boston Romance with a Charming Heroine

CHAPTER 48.

SHE glanced at the clock. Half-past twelve! How did it get so late?

"Why, I never looked at the other letter," she said aloud, and sat up in bed.

It was postmarked Portland, Ore., and it had been forwarded from home. Phil! she drew the night lamp nearer

My darling girl:

Well, here I am out in Portland Ore., thinking about getting home once again to a certain party. I have sure made good up here. Wait till I see you. I always told you I would strike it right, and I did. Girl, you won't believe it. Tell Mia to kill the fattest turkey. I will strike home next week, or the week after at the latest Remember me to the folks. Love and kisses.

PHIL.

P. S.—Have you been true to me? She read it through, very slowly, to the end. Then she switched off the light, and lay very still, in the dark.

Phil! The thought of him brought vague, wistful longings, stirred old bitter-sweet memories, buried in her heart. The day they borrowed Rose Sweeney's snooker and found the first Spring poppies in the hills. But she always ended by thinking of Sloan.

"Oh, Sloan, come back! Don't stay away!" And she would reach out her arms to him in the dark.

"That's madness. You can't go on like that! Stop!" she'd whisper to herself, brokenly, but she couldn't stop, couldn't stop caring even if he never came back.

All day long in the store she would live for closing time when she could go home, to see if there was a letter in the box. And no letter came, no message, no word to ease the loneliness.

"Perhaps if I went home—saw the folks—that would help!"

She almost ran the last block to the house. She wanted to feel Ma's arms about her, to hide from the choking, humiliating memories that haunted her, to ease the gnawing hunger in her heart, to be a little girl again, just for a day.

"Oh, Ma! It's so good to be home!" She looked about gratefully.

Pa clumped up the back steps from the garden. "Well, if it isn't the young lady!"

Joe and Frank came in from the side street, where they had been paying ball. "Tired of high-life already?"

"Finding out when you were well off, eh? I told you so."

"Oh, you make me tired. I came home to see Ma—that's all. I love it in Allston, but it's nice to be home too."

Ma hugged her wistfully. "My baby."

They had tea on the kitchen table "Oh, the handle's broken on the teapot, when did it break?" she cried

Funny how you have to be away a while to really see your own home, your own folks. Dad's garden, that sweet tangle of pansy and zinnias, and chrysanthemums and queen wins she had forgotten how dear that was.

"I'm going to stay over night."

They were all so glad to have her. Even Millie, who came over to borrow two eggs and a can of tomatoes, was pleased.

A Sweet Confidence in the Kindliness of Life Came Over Her

For the first time in two weeks she slept deeply, dreamlessly. A soft peace was over her. A sweet confidence in the kindliness of life. It might be a little dull, a little sad, with Sloan gone, but he'd come back. There would come the happy end.

A disquieting experience awaited her at the store. A short, thick set man bought a book and insisted on talking to her.

"I believe we have a mutual friend," he said, "Mr. Cuyler. He used to be an old side-kick of mine, back in Louisiana. Haven't seen him for a long time. Is he in town now?"

"Why, no," said Rosemary, wonderingly. "But how did you know I knew Mr. Cuyler? I only met him once."

"That so?" The big man came a little closer. His steely eyes were boring into hers. "Strange, because Cuyler often spoke of you to me. Told me to be sure and look you up."

"Me?" A cold, unreasoning terror gripped Rosemary. Her knees shook under her. What did tas man mean?

"Yes, he particularly said for me to go in and see Miss Clark, in Graharty's bookstore, and he wanted me to—"

"But I'm not Miss Clark!"

"No? Well, that's strange! I didn't know there was more than one young lady here."

"There isn't. I'm the only one—"

"And you aren't Nina Clark?"

"No."

"I don't suppose you know any Miss Clark?" He put his hands in his pockets and teetered up and down on his toes, waiting for her answer. Anger mixed with Rosemary's fear. Anger, and a dread of what this man might bring to Nina Clark might be another from Cuyler's wife, someone sent to spy upon her.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Derry and Tony Landor Spend an Afternoon at Fenway Park

'Summer Bachelors'; Derry Takes Luncheon With Tony Landor

"Payment!" he repeated. "Are you in my debt?"

"Don't you regard me as being?" Her face held a clear flush into the moonlight. A frown of his slid. "Are you actually concerned about the innocent escapade of the store?"

"Am I?"

"If I were, what then?"

"I'd send you a statement of the amount at once."

"I won't pay it," she declared "until I get good and ready! What are you doing next?"

"Putting it in the hands of a collection agency," he said, but his accent was all bad luck." He looked quite relevingly boyish when he grinned that way. Derry took in tant and dare resolution.

"I didn't mean about the debt I meant what are you doing now?"

"Oh!" Peg back downtown. Why?"

"Nothing as little good customers out to his son, purely as a matter of business of course."

"Yes, I know those business invitations. You always get into the hill, somehow. Therefore, suppose you lunch with me."

"That was the intention all the time," stated Derry, with calm frankness, "though it took a good deal of pressure to put it over. But are you allowed to dispense meals to casual business women?"

"Allowed?" He was frankly puzzled.

"Then I suppose Mrs. Landor isn't so old fashioned as to object."

"Mrs. Landor is dead." Lightened accordi... "Oh, well, you see, she isn't in the way."

"The mouse's carnivail Cat, your self Derry," chuckled the girl "What would she say if she knew about the dress?"

Then Derry got her jolt. "She does."

You told her!

"Certainly."

"I don't believe—— What did she say?"

Peg laughed.

"Was that your wife with you when I saw you at the Recherche?"

"Did you see me at the Recherche?" He gave the impress on of striving conscientiously to summon memory to his aid. Big again! Double big!

"And was that the reason you did not ask me to dance with you?"

"It would have been a violation of the bargain. I'm an honorable gent Strictly."

"Is this luncheon thing in accord ance with the bargain?"

"You started it."

"I have to start everything," complained Derry ruefully. "Or else it would never get a start.

"I know I'm slow," he admitted as they left the office. "Lack of experience. I've never had much time for—for this sort of thing This much I will admit, now that business is over. There was a personal element in my coming to you. Doubt it was mostly chance, if I come again, it will be my choice. No chance in it."

The luncheon in the Rock Bay was skillfully ordered, but not feminine enough for Derry. After it was over —what! "Back to the grind for the honest working girl," she slightly rather elaborately.

"The Yankees are playing the Red Sox this afternoon."

"Crash! goes the good old resolution. You've ruined my career for the day."

He looked doubtful. "But you would not be willing to go as I do, as a simple low-down rooter in the bleachers."

"Oh, yes!" She recalled smiling "It's been the very gayest afternoon I've had since I crashed through my shell," and she as they jostled their way through the high humored mass on the return trip from Fenway Park.

He did not suggest their repeating it. On the way back he was rather silent. The lavish gayety seemed to have left him. Once or twice he looked at her, as if he meant to say something. At the office, whither she elected to return before going home to avoid gossip

"I've always thought that a fetching a ruffled shirt

"Well?" she inquired. "Has some one been removing the stiff one?"

It was an indirect, if not brilliant attempt to help him say. "I told myself that I wouldn't life a finger to see you again."

"Well, don't you want to see me again—ever?"

"I wanted to too much. The purely artistic interest was a pretty thin, but it didn't quite prove up. So I stopped going to the Recherche."

"So I noticed." Derry bit her lip and stopped. But he took no heed of it.

"Then the business of Nowhere's mind reminds me how I meant to see you. What is your call that?"

"Call? Good Lord, if you want me to see further—"

"I don't. We've agreed to call it even. Have done now that we've got to the point of the—"

"Whose choice? I've got a choice in the matter."

"Suppose I didn't want you to come here. Would it be much easier for both of us if I just settled up that old account and thanked you for a day—such a corker of a day, Tony Landor!—and quit all even?"

"No. No, no!"

She also donned her bantering tone. "If ever I do pay that debt it will mean something."

"What—"

"I don't be for you to find out."

"Won't you give me a hint?"

She shook her head "I don't know myself. But I've a decided hunch it will be something special. If it ever comes off, which it prob ably won't."

He held out his hand "Good bye, then, and abruptly.

It was on Derry's lips to ask when she would see him again, but she choked it.

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

"Ralph cared for me—in a fine way," I murmured, feeling as if Ned were pressing a knife to my heart. "He was a good friend. And now he is gone too. I gave very long up for him. I was trying to make him the man he was meant to be—"

"—that!" Neal ordered brusquely "If you talked that sanctimonious stuff to Ralph, no wonder he beat it now and then to a woman who was ready to be amusing, to flatter him a bit, to pay pretty indeed if read ing him a not-to-chaw plot act I'm afraid you are on the wrong track. You don't understand men."

"Sometimes I think I don't want to." I replied coldly. "If this is what association with men in the world of big business is doing to your fineness and sweetness, I don't want to know men who are having my way. Neal so. I tell you Jim went too far. He played his game of philandering once too—" This time I knew—too much. He wouldn't stand for my knowing — and acknowledging that I knew. He went on to say that black was white to call him an angel when I knew he had acted like a very modern man. I couldn't. He can see me off now. I don't ocg to be taken back, that's final."

Neal's face went crimson as he leered to his feet with an angry "So it's 'final,' is it? And that is what I get for leaving my wife and babies and traveling five days to see what I can do for you? You've given me your ultimatum Now I'll give you mine"

"Are you going to cast me off too?" was all I could manage to gasp.

"Hello, Anne!" he greeted "How a yourself? Fine! That's great. I was a bit worried about you. Got back yesterday and saw Derringforth. He told me you had been looking for a job; gave him as reference Say—who put the kibosh on your business and sent you out hunting jobs? That won't do at all, at all I've got something for you! Something big! Can you be at my office at eleven?

"Can I?" I cried. "Count on me.

It was a good omen. One of my friends had rallied to my aid with out asking questions or making con d tions. Fine and, indeed, relented I flow was I to guess that the cruel est blow of all awaited me—just around the corner of the street of happiness I was ready to tread?

Well, I just reached Peter's office at eleven, after a heartening breakfast of mean and coffee and rolls with crisp bacon, I found a message asking me to wait for an hour as something important had delayed him. But it was worth waiting, for when Peter arrived, I found one friend who hadn't changed in the least.

Peter was his dapper, debonair, well groomed, crisp and friendly self He was frightfully anxious that I had tried for employment of the sort I had sought, and failed to get with the Direct Importing Company But I didn't mind that somehow. It was refreshing to find that someone wasn't thinking what I owed my family and their position. It was considering the fine job I had been independent too long to enjoy punching a time clock and taking orders.

The proposition about which Peter wanted to see me was a fine one. It appeared he had been put in touch with a firm that was putting out a wonderful new face cream on a small scale. He had met the woman who was manufacturing it while on his trip through the Central and Rockies and had become interested after Irma and Lorraine attested to its delightful qualities as a preventer of dry skin, and wind burn, as a base for powder and as a refreshing cleanser.

"At first I thought I'd handle it myself," said Peter "but when I began to probe its possibilities I decided that it ought to have not a local circuit on, be pushed by a nation campaign, be financed by a big stock deal, and be made one of the big toilet necessities of the country And then I thought of you. So I told Mrs. Dean to meet me in New York today on her way home to the South and I'd arrange to have the woman for the job with me We're stay ing at the Ranifer!—"

"Not so fast," I protested, though what he had told me of the proposition interested me vastly. "I've a date with Neal."

To be Continued Tomorrow.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and am deeply in love with a young lady five years my senior. I believe she loves me.

My mother objected to my keeping company with her. I have explained to my mother that I love the young lady and that I certainly want me to keep company with her, and tells me that if I continue to keep company with this young lady she will have me put away until I am twenty-one.

Nothing would make me happier than to keep company with the girl I love.

Will you please advise me what to do? WORRIED.

YOUR parents are legally responsible for your actions until you become of age, my friend, so I'm afraid you are legally bound to follow your mother's instructions until that time. She has your happiness and interest at heart, so the wisest thing for you to do is to follow her advice.

Later on, when you are a few years older, you will, of course, decide on your own friendships without her interference, although you may always value her advice.

WHEN YOUR SON OR DAUGHTER IS AWAY AT SCHOOL

You want that son or daughter of yours who has entered a college to be as well dressed and have as much spending money as his or her associates.

In letters you are told of the larger allowance that this one or that one has, with the inference that their standards are higher.

You may be making a great sacrifice to keep that boy or girl in college, and naturally you'd like your child to have the same privileges as others in the school.

By denying yourself much that you should have, by depriving yourself home of much that they have a right to expect, you may be providing luxuries for the one who is already receiving a generous portion of your income.

When you provide spending money enough to do all the things that other sons or daughters do, and your income does not warrant it you are establishing a bad precedent.

Your child does not appreciate the value of a dollar and therefore is being a lesson which ought to be learned as young as possible.

If a parent does not require some effort on the child's part in return for what he receives he cannot be expected to realize its value.

Extravagant habits at college breed dissatisfaction in later life.

ORDERS

By Louise P. Armstrong

FRANK SCABURY was a plain young man, of a more plain gray color which hung loosely upon his tall figure. His morals were nondescript affairs and his short color a soft pulish. But for all that Frank was no sluggard; ambition glowed like a beacon in his brain, ever urging him to better things. Which was strange, seeing that he was but a clerk for old Amos Higgins, senior of Saddlerock dry goods emporium.

He was at the store early mornings, the first to greet customers. It was also the last to depart and to all was fatally delegated the duty of closing up for the night. Old man Higgins, seeing that he was absorbed in his work to the exclusion of most all else, piled more and more details upon the lad. Frank accepted these as a matter of course. He never grumbled at the added responsibilities but felt pride in the trust and confidence reposed in him.

Old man Higgins had a daughter who was extremely pretty—and spoiled. She was his only child, and since her mother's death three years before he had not found it in his heart to deny her anything. Neighbors commented upon the extravagance of Laura Higgins, but none had the temerity to counsel her father on the subject. Though deemed a rather close man in other respects, his purse-strings were certainly wide whenever Laura made demands.

On a Wednesday afternoon in the early fall, Mr. Higgins received a wire from the city requesting his presence at a meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association. He had not intended going, but flattered by the bid he decided to accept. So he called to Frank, when he came by the store the following morning on his way to the train: "Laura is giving a party tomorrow night. Let her have whatever money is necessary to buy refreshments. And Frank, you might drop around during the evening and see that everything is going well."

Frank grinned on from a local trade journal in which he was immersed and nodded. "Certainly, sir. Glad to help." His mind was still upon the problem of the commission merchant, and though he heard Mr. Higgins' words, until full report did not register until his employer was well on his way. "Great Guns!" the youth exclaimed in some display. "Wish I'd thought to ask him to be more specific!"

He had cause indeed to wish so, when Laura walked into the store about two hours later and asked for one hundred dollars. He looked into the winsome face of the girl, framed with enchanting brown curls. Her head tilted proudly and her blue eyes regarded him aloofly. "To buy the refreshments for my party," she added with a lift of her straight brows.

"I believe that's rather too much to be spending on refreshments, Miss Laura." Frank spoke firmly but courteously. "I should think, now, about twenty-five—"

She drew herself up haughtily and stared.

"Your father," he sought to explain, "told me to give you what was necessary, Miss Laura. He didn't give me permission to turn over the entire till to you."

Her eyes blazed, and he could see that she fought to keep back tears of rage. "Very well" she said quickly. "Give me the money."

She snatched it from him, turned and left the store.

It was late that afternoon when Frank remembered the last part of his employer's instructions. "You must drop around—see that every thing's all right!" He pictured his entrance upon Laura Higgins' party, and felt cold chills run down his spine. "And yet," thought Frank, "she's just a girl—and maybe he expects me to exercise some judgment."

So after looking up the store, he turned with lagging steps and ascended the hill west of the town where the home of Amos Higgins, a white columned affair, sprawled amid a grove of oaks and locusts. He had never been there before, though he had been invited frequently. He had felt it foolish to try and mingle with prosperous people, when he had so little money of his own. Imagine his feelings now as he trudged up the graveled pathway in the moonlight, clad in his office clothes, sure that the welcome extended him would be a frigid one!

There was no one upon the verands, and such a merry noise within that when he rang the bell its sound could not be heard above the clamor. The long living-room with its old fashioned windows running down to the floor was aglow with light.

After standing for several minutes vainly ringing the bell, Frank stepped to the windows and glanced in. He started in surprise and smothered an angry exclamation. Then he quickly jerked open one of the windows, and stepped through into the midst of the startled company. He did not pause an instant, but reached out and snatched a pocket flask from a callow youth who was about to hold it up to Laura's lips.

Pandemonium broke loose. But through the hisses and jeers, Frank led the boy out, holding him firmly by the collar with one hand, while in the other he clasped the flask. Outside he handed the container back to the fellow. "You should know better," he said, "than to bring drink to Miss Laura's party!"

"And who are you," demanded the angry voice of the girl behind him, "to force your way into our home—insult one of my guests!" She was a lovely picture, clad in her pink silk party frock which shimmered in the moonlight. Frank was not thinking now of the picture she made; his anger matched her own.

"Do you imagine," he asked "that I came here because I wanted to? I am only obeying your father's orders. I have no desire to intrude, no yearning for your society or that of your friends. They're not the sort of people I care to know. And now if you will assure me that what I have just witnessed will not be repeated, I'll be glad to go."

Her burning glances met, like a pair of crossed swords, but it was Laura's eyes that dropped. She flounced and in her crushed fluffiness, she said finally, "I'll see that nothing else happens which would be subject to your censure." Her tone was cutting, but it did not annoy him with a curt nod, he turned and took his leave.

Next day Mr. Higgins arrived at the store early. Frank entered and found him busily sorting cases of canned goods. The old man nodded and continued his labors. Frank saw that his face was inscrutible and could not but wonder what Laura's report of the affair at her party had been. He was not to wonder long. A slight movement at the door, and he glanced up from his desk to behold the girl walking down the aisle toward him.

"Well," the voice of old man Higgins broke the stillness, "I see you've come."

"Yes, Father," she answered briefly, "just as I said I would." She crossed to the cashier's desk then and faced the disconcerted young man there. "I've come to ask your pardon," she told him simply. "I was rude. I guess you've told Father."

He flushed. "I have nothing to tell your father, Miss Laura. I suppose, though, you have."

"Why no, Frank," Mr. Higgins broke in, "Laura has told me nothing, except that she is sorry for something she said to you." He looked at them both and laughed. "A youngsters' quarrel! I advise you to forget it. Come up to the house tonight, Frank, we're all friends and I've asked you often."

Frank glanced questioningly at the girl. Her pretty face was crimson but she looked at him steadily. "I hope you will come," she said.

"Indeed," he cried, clasping the little hand she held out, "I shall be delighted to!"

When she had gone her father regarded his clerk quizzically. "Seems to have taken a fancy to you, Frank. You must have been right generous with that party money."

"She wanted a hundred," Frank told him. "But I thought it too much. I only gave her twenty-five."

Mr. Higgins dropped his hammer and sat down suddenly on the box he had been opening. He grinned. "Say, Frank," he remarked casually, "come up to the house tonight sure. I want you and Laura to be good friends!"

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

WEEK-END guests are becoming so bold lately that several hosts and hostesses have formed an organization to combat them.

ONE of the rules is that people who call without an invitation will be insulted by the maid.

OF course if the hostess has asked you to visit her, then it's up to her to insult you personally.

WEEK-END guests will not be entitled to the comfortable beds.

AND when they're in the parlor they'll also have to keep out of the easy chairs.

WHY should the company enjoy them when the host has to struggle to make the payments?

ANOTHER rule is that ladies will not be allowed to use the hostess' cold cream and the men must bring their own razor blades.

ONE woman went visiting the other day and her little girl ate up three bottles of bath salts. She thought it was rock candy.

LATER in the afternoon she took the perfume atomizer off the dresser and went out in the woods and sprayed polecats.

IN the future, week-end pests will not be allowed to look at the Sunday papers until the host and hostess are through with them.

THE host reserves the right to protect his cigars by putting mouse traps in the humidor.

BUT of course if he catches any fingers or thumbs he's not justified in keeping them.

HE should either return them to the owner or give them to the cat.

WOMEN guests should make use of the basin in the bathroom and not wash their linguerie in the goldfish bowl.

WHEN a hostess sees a bunch of company coming up the front steps, there's only one thing that can make her happier, and that's to watch them going down.

DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT KIDNEY POISON

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

CLEARING JELLIES.

An old-fashioned and excellent way to clear jellies when straining them is to break up a clean egg shell and put it in the straining cloth.

Do This when you first Sneeze

When a sneeze suggests that a cold has started, it is easily headed off. It need never develop, but the only way to prevent it is to have the right help on hand.

If a cold has developed, check it quickly. You can do that in 24 hours. But do more than that. Stop the fever, open the bowels, eliminate the poisons, tone the entire system. Then you will probably feel much better than when the cold began.

The best help is HILL'S. It combines the helps needed — all of them modern discoveries. One of the world's largest laboratories developed it as the utmost help for colds. It is so efficient, so complete that we paid $1,000,000 for it. The use has grown and grown, until millions now employ it.

You will always know what to do for a cold when you once try HILL'S. But don't delay. Conquer that cold by tomorrow.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

THE difference between romance and petting is the difference between loving somebody and loving "just anybody."

Of course, platonic friendship always leads to love and marriage—but, while it lasts you have the sweet illusion that there IS such a thing!

Many a man looks upon the marriage certificate as "just a scrap of paper"; but when he starts paying alimony, he discovers that divorce decrees "don't mean maybe"!

* * *

There is always some man who can convince a wailing widow that a bond in the hand is worth two in the safe-deposit box.

* * *

With the passing of every love-affair, a woman loses one more dream, one more illusion, and one more ounce of faith.

The ultimate proof that a man really loves you, is not his willingness to do a lot for you, but his willingness to do WITHOUT a lot, for you.

* * *

After a woman has been married to the same man for ten years, even a rubber-stamped compliment from another man brings the color to her cheeks and brightens up her whole day.

In New York City you can dine in every language on earth, but you can't get a plain boiled potato in ANY of them.

* * *

No man's vanity will allow him to believe that his wife is not a wee bit jealous of his.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now, instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c, 30c, 60c.

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

By William F. Kirk.

PA, I asked my old gent last nite, what does it mean, Dissy-lushun? I sed.

Sure is the word used, Bobbie, sed Pa.

It says here in the book, Vera Grantham engraved back, a Peck of terribul Dissy-lushun on her chissell Teechure, I sed.

Well, sed Pa, that means she was terribully dissapointed in something, sed Pa. It means she must of felt the way I felt the last time I bet on Dempsey, sed Pa. Life is full of them Dissy-lushuns, Bobbie, sed Pa.

I will Xplane the word most thurro, Bobbie, sed Ma. In this life there are Illushuns & Dissy-lushuns, sed Ma. Was a trusting young bride marries a gallint husband, sed Ma, she thinks she is marrying a Ark Angel, sed Ma. That is her illushun, the poor little thing, sed Ma. After a wile, sed Ma, she realizes that her idol has clay feet, sed Ma. That is her Dissy-lushun. In other words, her walking up to cold trowth, sed Ma.

I see, I sed.

Yes, Bobbie, sed Pa, & onst in a vary grate wile you read of a trusting old gent that marrys a blushing bride & when his bankroll is gone he finds a note on the table, sed Pa, saying the wife is going away & it will be foolish to look for her. They mite spare themselfs the trubbel of adding that last line, sed Pa. But seven thats sum of the poor old simps look for them, like Cassier Joe, sed Pa.

Who is Cassier Joe? I asked.

He wasent cool, Bobbie, sed Pa, he was like sevin at a throw.

He was a noshel man to forgive his poor work wife, sed Ma.

We will not argew about it, said Pa.

You know you wud be noshel enuf to do the saim thing, said Ma.

Dosn't mailk any X-periments, sed Pa.

No dainger, sed Ma. I am perfekly satisfied with my surroundings, sed Ma.

GASSY STOMACH

THE SELTZER THAT WONT AFFECT THE HEART

Do you have pains around your heart, in your side or in your back? People often think they have heart trouble, myocarditis or kidney trouble, but it's often gas that causes distress. Get Pepsinic Seltzer at your druggist if you want immediate relief. You'll never be without it.

WAR WITH U. S. FORESEEN BY VON TIRPITZ

formal right of America to furnish munitions this initial timidity soon gave way to brutal and open support of the Allies by munitions shipments in gigantic quantities, as well as through the manufacture on the ground of all kinds, including U-boats, airplanes, automobiles, etc.

"As a result, America's whole economic resources were employed on the side of the Allies, especially England, America became interested in England's preservation and thus the German cause's defeat.

"The huge capital already invested in the cause of the Allies, as I have it, will compel further investment and an ever-increasing partisanship with closer amalgamation of economic forces.

AIMED AT JAPAN

"Furthermore, in America the conception has grown that Japan's hostility is eventually one of the dangers and the feeling that this will sooner or later come to a show-down has grown more and more intense.

"If not between the government, there certainly exist very close connections between the trust-leaders in England and America whose aim it is to further the Anglo-Saxon trade developments through the united forces of England and America, to effect the World War.

"But first it is necessary to save England's position in Europe. In other words Germany must first be beaten. Only then can Anglo-American leanings calmly weave its nets over the world.

"It follows that the United States of America, whether they want to or not—are directly interested in our defeat. They have already become a directly participating enemy of Germany—the report of the Imperial German ambassador in Washington of December 7, 1915, says that he considers himself stationed in an enemy country and that a break will be at America's latitude must be counted as one of the 'immediate probabilities.'

"What we have done so far in greeting the United States demands that it had the closest ties with her is it to be expected that anything we can do—except win the war—will help us? Even if the munitions shipments will not be prohibited or restricted, nor will America undertake any energetic steps against the English blockade which is plainly in violation of international law. We will get no cotton, and the great allied loan in America has been publicly floated.

CAN RISK BREAK

"We must face this situation today and must realize that we cannot tackle England energetically without running the risk to break with America. If we have the will to vanquish England we cannot continue to live in America's debt.

"In no circumstances can we count upon America assuming the role of a friendly mediator. England and America constitute a necessarily solid front against us.

"However, if we achieve a real success against England—a success that is decisive—since the United States is already giving energetic support to the Allies and an open partisanship of that country would no longer mean an essential augmentation of our strength.

"A victory gained by a ruthless employment of all weapons against England will consist all that we might incur through a possible intervention by America. After all, the only way to force England to her knees we have the will to beat England, and would have to be ready for a war the decisive means for the war is

"If the submarine warfare is to have a decisive effect, traffic must not be confined to hostile shipping but, as was demand 3 before the beginning of the U-boat war, it must destroy England's entire maritime commerce.

"VON TIRPITZ."

ARMY FOR U-BOATS

Captain Mann to Lieutenant Commander Erich Edgar Schulze

"Great Headquarters at Pless

"February 7, 1916.

"There is quite a bit to report from here. First of all, a wild struggle is raging around the U-boat warfare. On our side are Falkenhayn with the entire staff of the Minister of War, the Admiralty staff, as well as nearly all parliamentarians of Germany. Against us are Admiral Von Mueller, Scheffer, Bethmann, Jagow, Rallin, etc.

"The Kaiser has approved the beginning of unrestricted U-boat warfare on March 1st. The notes announcing this to the neutrals should be sent off as soon as they are not being edited yet as the decision of the outcome of the tension with America is to be awaited.

"America is dragging the thing along, of course, and thus it is probable that the opening of the U-boat war will be postponed with the help of the Chief of Operations of the army command now demands support by the U-boats in the Atlantic.

"That is what I am working for here with all might and main, and I hope to be successful. At least I am finding some understanding for it. Von Wenninger, who has great influence with Falkenhayn, is a good ally in this.

Armistice Day Suggestion

A Reader Sends a Plan for Honor to the Unknown Soldier

The following timely letter from a reader is so good in thought and wording that we give it our best space:

"The 'Unknown Soldier,' resting at Arlington, is the great symbol of democracy that came out of the war. He is the greatest common denominator of the 4,000,000 men, privates and officers, of the A. E. F. He is one of the 78,000 American boys who fought 'over there' and fell 'over there' that this American nation might survive over here, and that the American idea in democratic government as writ by Jefferson and Washington and Madison and Lee and the other ninety Celtic-Saxon signers of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution might continue to work out to fulfillment, unimpaired, on this continent.

"Our 'Unknown Soldier' may be one of the 3,000 Americans of the Jewish faith, the 16,000 of the Catholic faith, the 58,000 of the Protestant faith, who died for us across the waters. During the war the lay associations of these churches—the Jewish Welfare Board, the Y. M. H. A., the Knights of Columbus, the Young Women's Christian Association and the Young Men's Christian Association, the Salvation Army—all these worked heroically and unintermittently, here and 'over there,' to aid and comfort the American boys in uniform.

"On November 11, the various American Legion Posts and the other military organizations will observe Armistice Day in formal ceremony. These lay organizations, too, will remember the day in their own social centres in respective gatherings.

"To honor the memory of the boys who died for U. S.—for all of us—would it not be fine for all these patriotic groups, in addition to their separate activities in their clubhouses, to dedicate in common ceremony one object of common reverence, a wreath, this wreath to be carried by airplane and dropped on the tomb of the 'Unknown Soldier' at Arlington on Armistice Day, when President Coolidge conducts the national ceremonies on that impressive occasion? Let us make a PILGRIMAGE THROUGH THE AIR to the nation's shrine.

"And if other cities along the Atlantic Coast within a morning's airplane flight to Washington, from Maine to Florida, and as far West as the cities in the Mississippi Valley, should each send its common symbol of communal patriotic devotion from all these religious groups, then these winged messengers, freighted with a people's love and precious memory for its departed son, converging that morning along the continental air-lanes on Armistice Day to Arlington, would make a NATION'S PILGRIMAGE THROUGH THE AIR.

"This, indeed, would become perennial living evidence in the skies overhead of what is in the nation's heart, a common reverence and devotion in-united bonds of deepest sentiments for the savior of our country, the 'Unknown Soldier,' who gave his life that America might live!"

Fellow Travelers

A thirsty man in Ontario, Canada, can get strong drink from either of two sources—through a prescription or from a bootlegger. Doctors and bootleggers both flourish.

On December 1 Ontario will vote on trying the Quebec plan of authorized sale through Government storehouses. It has tried prohibition and found it a failure. It is seeking a way back to temperance.

The United States is beginning to travel in the same direction.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

A WIFE has sent me this letter to print in the hope that her husband may read it.

There's many a husband who needs to read it!

Dear Floyd:

We quarreled last night when I asked you to take me to the movies.

We've quarreled so often lately, and always about the same, silly little things. I know I act badly when we quarrel. Somehow I can't keep from crying and then I say things that I am sorry for afterwards.

I am getting so discouraged about it all, Floyd. You say that "that's the way women always act," and then you walk out of the house and forget it. You think that it doesn't really amount to anything.

You're wrong, Floyd. It does amount to something. These continual quarrels are working more harm than you know. I am not trying to threaten you. But I am going to try to tell you just what is apt to happen if this goes on. I can't say it in words without getting angry and crying. So I am going to write it.

Our quarrels are always over the one thing—going out together at night and Sundays. You say I "want to gad around" and you claim that you're too tired. But it isn't just gadding around. I want the old companionship that we used to have when we were engaged and first married.

Did Enjoy Life

I married you to get that companionship. I didn't need to have you support me. Almost any girl can support herself nowadays. I married you because your companionship seemed sweeter than any possible career.

I took up housework, which I never liked, just to be near you and enjoy life with you. And, for a little while we did enjoy like together. Those first two years were wonderful. But for the last three years you have given less and less of yourself to me.

You are a hard worker and a good provider, Floyd. I never have to complain on that score. But as a lover you have almost ceased to exist.

When I tried to tell you this last night you snarled at me and said: "For heaven's sake, do I have to trail around with you like a nurse? Aren't you old enough to amuse yourself yet? I should think it was time you learned to stand on your own feet—"

You've told me so often that I ought to stand on my own feet, and whenever I tried to answer you I've cried. Well, I am going to answer you now and maybe the answer will surprise you. I AM old enough to stand on my own feet, Floyd, and I CAN do it. But have you ever thought what will happen to you and the home if I do it?

I can start tonight and "amuse myself" while you sit comfortably at home and read your paper. You won't mind. You will be pleased and say that I have come to my senses at last. But you will pay a big price if I come to my senses like that, Floyd.

Stop to Think

Have you ever stopped to think what an amount of competition a man has to face who tries to "hold a wife" these days? I don't mean the obvious, romantic competition of other men. That would never tempt me though it does tempt so many neglected wives. I mean the competition of thousands of opportunities which await an intelligent woman. The jobs which are so much more interesting than housework and pay so much better. Club work, music, art, classics, bridge, politics, settlement work—

All of these things are open to me, Floyd. All of these things will enrich their place in life. Do you want them to? Because, remember, if I start, it will be very hard to win me back. You won me once, when you had all the advantages of novelty and first infatuation on your side. But I'm used to you now. I know just how monotonous and uninteresting you can become.

I know how little I can get out of life with you—and how much I can get out of life filled with other interests. You'll have to be fifty times as clever as you were at first to win me back again if once I break away and "depend on my own resources" instead of on you.

Shall I start, Floyd?

YOUR WIFE.

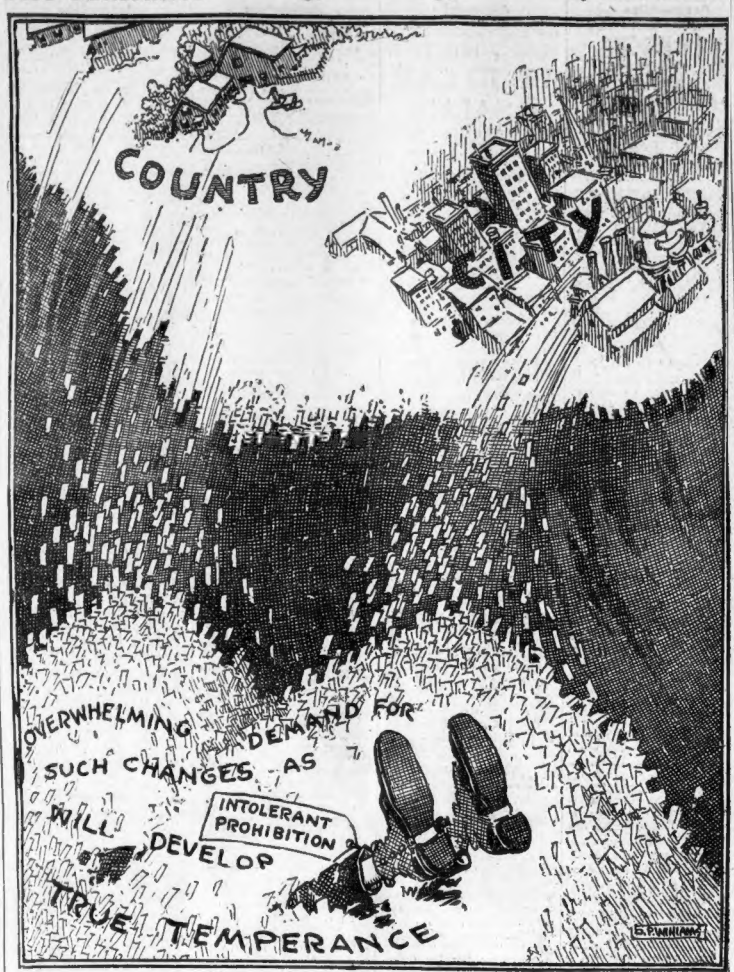
The Mandate

By O. P. William



THAT deluge of votes from city and country should not be misunderstood. It is NOT a bid for the saloon nor an invitation to drunkenness. It IS a sanction for a new approach to temperance. Before prohibition came, temperance was gaining steadily as the result of education, moral suasion and the rapid extinction of the open bar under local option. Prohibition made matters worse. The people want them bettered. In popular government the people ultimately get what they want.

Odds and Ends of the Town

TRAFFIC TOWERS

A BRONZE traffic tower, similar to the one at SUMMER and WASHINGTON streets, is being planned for MATTAPAN SQUARE, the gateway to all points on the SOUTH SHORE. The MATTAPAN-MILTON BOARD OF TRADE is fostering the project. LOUIS E. KIRSTEIN of FILENE'S popularized the idea of traffic towers when he presented one to the CITY OF BOSTON.

"JIMMY" GALLIVAN

CONGRESSMAN "JIMMY" GALLIVAN, nationally known for his stand on the prohibition question, played baseball for HARVARD. As chairman of a political rally in DORCHESTER he introduced COLONEL WILLIAM A. THE LEATHERNECKS' COURSE IN HAITI

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MANY people criticize the Americans for retaining the marines in Haiti.

President Louis Borno throws an interesting light upon the situation.

He says that the turbulent conditions prevalent in Haiti are the result of many little politicians craving the power of the government and always setting up an opposition.

As quickly as the little politicians set up their revolutionary ten pins, however, he says, the marines bowl them over.

"Haiti is most calm and peaceful today," said President Borno. "But remove your marines and you would restore the terrible state of revolution that obtained in 1915."

If the marines are kept in Haiti just a few years more, perhaps, until the people and the government have time to adjust themselves, then the marines may depart and Haiti will become permanently peaceful.

The American marines, therefore, are kept in Haiti, not by any desire of our government to dictate there, but as a result of a solemn obligation taken by the United States in 1915 and formally placed in effect in 1916. By this the United States accepted the duty of maintaining peace in Haiti and has maintained that peace ever since.

"It is not time yet to withdraw the marines," said President Borno, "for our opponents try always to maintain the spirit of reaction against the government."

In the terrifying times before American intervention more than one hundred and fifty political prisoners of the government, many of them prominent Haitians, were murdered by the State soldiery. The President was assassinated and the government overthrown by violence. Then came the treaty with America, and the marines. Our marines, therefore, are kept in Haiti merely to preserve the peace and to prevent violent overthrowing of the government. They are not there to oversawe democracy, but to give democracy a chance. In the course of time they will be withdrawn and Haiti will be permanently launched upon its career as one of the peaceful countries of the world.

Falling Stars and Sense

By Garrett P. Serviss.

A READER says that on Tuesday night, Oct. 19, about half the people of Mansfield, Ohio, were out on their porches until after 11 P. M., watching for a display of "falling stars" which had been predicted for that hour or thereabouts. He, happening to be in Mansfield, warned the "native population" that they would "see no falling stars tonight"—at least no more than any other night.

While, according to his own statement, his "knowledge of astronomy is about zero," he maintained that "science could not predict the falling of stars," and he considered that this conclusion was based on common sense.

However, in a comradely spirit he watched with the others, and all they got for their efforts were stiff necks. No one saw a star fall for 15 minutes each way from 11 P. M. Thereupon he "considered that argument cinched for good."

But two weeks later he got a letter informing him, at second hand, that there were people in Mansfield who asserted that they had seen several falling stars "at the above mentioned time."

Now, he wants to know what real common sense, and logic and science of the matter may be. If I agree with him he would like to forward an article to Mansfield; "the stronger the better, for as I had the last laugh at the time, they have since tried to discuss me with their accumulated belated testimonials."

This is different. There are very anyone interested in the diffusion of astronomical knowledge. It shows that people are ready to take up questions about the stars and celestial sights with a curiosity that the French would call "passionate."

But I must make the article strong the wrong way to suit my correspondent. Unless he takes the term "falling stars" in a literal sense, his supposed "common sense" has woefully misled him with regard to the ability of science to predict the occurrence of showers of what are more correctly termed "meteors."

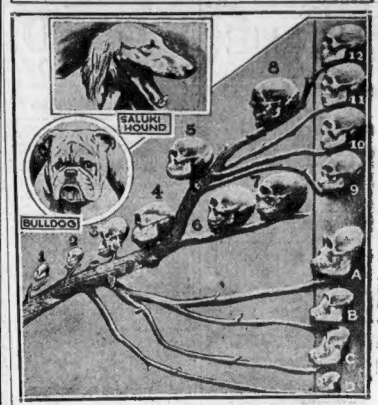
A Limb From Your Family Tree

So the Scientists Tell You



SEE THE SKULLS, AND LOOK AT THE DOGS. THEN HEAR THE EVOLUTIONISTS

Whether you agree with men or not you want to know what they have to say. Only the ostrich buries its head in the sand, only the fool closes his ears.

This gives you the story of our human ancestry, as the scientists of evolution would have it.

We are called "primates," as are the lower orders of monkeys. According to the evolutionists, George Washington, Christopher Columbus and Abraham Lincoln were primates, and so are you.

This branch from the family tree, extremely interesting, shows, according to the evolutionist, how the skulls of the monkeys have gradually changed into the skulls of highly developed men.

You have a right to believe what YOU choose about it. But no man has a right to refuse to LISTEN. We all went to know what the other man says.

According to the evolutionists the little skulls, one and two, are low orders of the primate group.

Three, four, five, six and seven are known as the "Java Man," the Piltdown man, the Heidelberg man, the Neanderthal man, and the Cro-Magnon man.

These five skulls are already semi-human or human, but you can't say much for No. 4, the "Java Man." He has a long way to go.

You must remember that, according to the evolutionists, it has taken millions of years gradually to change little monkey No. 1 into the American skull at the top, No. 2.

Our Cro-Magnon ancestor dates back a thousand centuries, but already he has a well-developed skull, and in some respects he may have been superior to the man of today. His brain probably weighed as much as yours, perhaps more, and he is supposed to have laid the foundations of much of our knowledge. Also he was courageous and killed off inferior kinds of men.

Number 12 is a skull of an American, 11 a Chinese, 10 a Hottentot, 9 an Australian savage.

A, B, C are apes, A is a gorilla, B is a chimpanzee, C is an orang-outang, and D is a gibbon.

According to some of the scientists, A is the ancestor of the negro race, B the ancestor of the white race, and C the ancestor of the Mongolian race.

You say, "This is all ridiculous, one skull could not through evolution have changed gradually so as to produce No. 12 from No. 1." You are entitled to your opinion. The evolutionists ask you to look at the picture of the two dogs' heads, published with this.

The bulldog and the Saluki hound beside him differ in appearance, more than the Java ape-man differs from No. 12, the United States citizen's skull.

Yet we know that breeding and a few years have produced these VERY different heads of dogs, from the same original wolfish ancestor.

The evolutionists say that the long-nosed Saluki hound and the short nose and fierce jaw of the bulldog are the results of evolution and breeding, "artificial selection," just as the different skulls and foreheads on this limb of the human family tree are the results of "natural selection" and evolution.

Believe what you like, that is the American citizen's privilege. What the scientists think is interesting.

It is for us to decide and as the Bible tells us, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."
